MINNESOTA Centennial 1849 — 1949

The story of developing primitive trails into modern super highways during the past 100 years.

"How is the spirit of a people to be formed and animated and cheered but out of the storehouse of its historic recollections?"

. . . . . .

. . . . . .

And lots were staked for sale

Moving ever outward and westward in their quest for new homes, the early pioneers hewed primitive trails from the forest, sought out natural fords over the streams and scored the prairie with deep winding ruts as wagon followed wagon in endless trains. At many an overnight stop some enterprising individual with far-reaching vision stayed, and house by house, lot by block, village grew in order to supply the pioneers with trade and supplies. As settlements grew to towns and towns grew to cities, more and better roads were inevitable, at first geared to the slow and pleasant gait of the horse and buggy, then gradually changing character to meet the increasing speed of truck and pleasure vehicles.

Today the great network of roads that serves the teeming thousands of city and farm, bent on pleasure and business, is a far cry from these early and primitive trails. The many miles of new roads that are constantly being added represent new responsibilities of construction and maintenance. The challenge of an ever-increasing population, permanent and transient, is ours to meet. Each straightened curve, each reduced grade and each improved mile of road adds to the security, safety and pleasure of Minnesota, to its citizens and its visitors.
