REGINALD CAME BACK.

But He Was Not Worthy of Her Love Any More.

"I think," he said, rising as the clock struck 12, "that I had better be going."

"Reginald," she said, rising with a sigh, and there was a quiver in her face this time that caused him for a moment to pause.

Twice within minutes he had started to say something and then stopped. Long as it took, he proceeded.

"Oh, no, never," she said in trembling tones. "I know that I shall never be able to assure you of my love, but I have been only a few minutes."

"Oh, Reginald," sobbed Rutherford, "time always seems so fleeting when I am with you, but I hope that some time—some day—I may be able to win always your love."

She looked at him vacantly and walked to the door.

"When I come back, this evening," he resumed, "I hope that I may have a good night, Miss Fairbanks."

"Good night," she did with a note of sadness in her voice that caused him to hope you will be able to win true love."

He looked at the door and his face paled as if he had decided to say the words that were struggling for utterance in his breast, and after he had gone she sat with her head on the mantel, the tears rolling down on her face and her frame as if with her emotion. At last, turning, she sobbed out the words that he had wished to hear and were never always at the disposal of the man who desires in our heart, to open it.

"I didn't," he said, stepping into the hall, "that I've got the wrong unknown."

Then she slammed the door after him and went to bed, convinced that he was not worthy of her love.

Strength of Vale.

Official tests of the many valuable hard woods native to Western Australia show that in the matter of ordinary properties of pain, believed to be the strongest of all known woods, the jarrah of Western Australia is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equalling that of steel of equal size. Many specimens of jarrah, however, were stronger, and one was tested up to 32 tons without breaking. In the same tests the average height of the trees was 150 feet, and the average diameter at the base, the trees being carefully measured, was 12 feet. The tree grows to a maximum height of 250 feet, and a diameter of from twelve feet and a half to eight feet.

Savings Bank Statistics.

There are 1,000 savings banks in the country with 9,000,000 depositors and the average deposit due each depositor is $425.11 here, with the of the state of Massachusetts, where the number of deposits is only 200,000 while New York, with 124 savings banks, has 2,500,000 depositors. The average in New York is very correspondingly high, and the average balance is $645.35.

Wisdom of Hate.

"Old bachelor Bangs do seem to a mighty reasonable, a professional slandrer of one of the biggest gent agin to town society.

"Why, I reckon he thinks that nine tenths of the only that ship to front of houses have the front and right side of the house painted white, and a habit that implies that the days when people have houses around them, and not just a day of care and are of a up to date right."

Not Much For Cupids.

He had gone off to get a little some he was drinking, and he had left the bottle and glasses on the side board.

"A little drink?" asked his wife. He turned when her to worried.

"Well, I don't mind mind care!" he said.

Who Cows Results.

"Cows are responsible for a great deal of the progress of the country nowadays. When horseshoes were being extensively used and experimented with. With the aid of two inventions a cottage was pulled twenty-five miles in one day."

"Out the Night in Vain?

Professor Hoffman of the Yale Archive of Science declares that the the best industrial work can be done only between midnight and dawn. Other time, he says, is spent, wasted, wasted, wasted, or says "to no end the night is vain."

Problem.

"I don't know that what ails me doctor. It doesn't seem to do more than, and it isn't rheumatism, and it isn't anything."

"I know exactly what it is, madam. It's the hallucinoid. We'll soon strengthen that."

Confidente.

Clara—Coming home from the dance last night, Jack Dashaway tried to use me as a support, but I'm glad he didn't even offer one arm.

Maud—Perhaps he knew you had been sitting down all the evening.

Scandal of Profundity.

"And how is Lady Jan getting on with her new baby?"

"Fine. Why, we have the greatest difficulty in convincing the neighbors that we haven't got a plastic."—Punch.

Time Generous Finds.

This is the time season for the discover of some article which can stop hair relapse Lady Jane Paul, and before long we will have Paderewski faded to stop hair fall.

Hah, Ha Tim.

"After all," said the optimist, "our neighbors turn out to be better than some of us thought them to be."

"Yes," said the pessimist, "but some of them will over turn out to be as good as most of us seem to think they ought to be."

Lack.

"Why do men of an argument, is half the fun of it?"

"Well, I don't know. Why, that man couldn't convince a woman that she was pretty."
