

Capt. L. W. Collins has tendered his resignation as member of the House of Representatives, and the Governor has accepted it. The law prohibits the holding of the office of legislator and judge by one man. The resignation works no particular hardship to Capt. Collins, for unless an extra session is called he would have no occasion to act as representative, his time expiring before the next regular session.

As the time approaches for the