(Opposing SF610 – daycares ability to deny exemptions)

I'm writing you today to express the huge feeling of dread that comes upon me when thinking of this bill being passed. I'm a mother of 2 children (8 and 5 yo) living in Crystal, MN and can recall how stressful it was figuring out childcare for my kids already, without the added burden of finding a center that will accept my child given my strongly held convictions about not administering the full schedule of childhood vaccines to them.

With my first, Elisabeth, I had no idea that daycares had waiting lists a mile long for infant care. How would I know that, as a first time mom with no other close mom friends who would give me the advice to start looking ASAP? So I waited until I was 6 months pregnant, only to find that my preferred daycare (one that was on site at my job and would be most convenient) would be full, and I could only be placed on the waitlist. I put my name on the waitlist, and started looking elsewhere. Out of all the sites I looked that were between my home and my job (both centers as well as in home care), only one had any openings. I put our name down for that one, but later heard that there was a staff member who had been accused of inappropriately touching toddlers. That REALLY didn't sit well with me, but unfortunately, there was really not much I could do, as there were no other openings at the time.

Fast forward to me being pregnant with my second, Malcolm. This time I started the process earlier in my pregnancy, however with 2 kids, the daycare centers were out of the question – I just didn't make enough for it to make sense to pay that amount of money for two. Instead I began searching for licensed in home centers. I had to again expand my search because the ones that were between my home and my work were unable to take an infant and toddler. I found one that was just beyond my work, but when I brought up that we used the conscientious exemption that MN allows for both schools and daycares, they told me that they (illegally) did not accept exemptions. Could I have pushed them? Yes, but who wants to try to force someone to care for your children? I didn't want my kids to be treated differently or any retaliation be done to them because I forced the issue. I ended up having to find a stranger who was not a licensed daycare provider to watch my kids so I could work. I didn't feel entirely great about this choice either, but it was my only option.

I tell you my story because it happened before there was an ability for daycares to exclude based on parent's strongly held beliefs, before parents will have to choose between going back to work for much needed income, or staying home with their children to maintain those convictions. I tell you my story because the fears of discrimination that I, and so many parents have, have already happened even without this bill having been passed. Daycare is already hard to get into, let alone without having additional ways for people to be excluded.

I beg you all to vote NO on this bill – for the sake of families like mine, who want quality care for their children and are already finding it difficult with the status quo.
