Bill Description

SF2940 amends the Minnesota Consumer Data Privacy Act ("MCDPA") to include restrictions around the processing of health data. The bill defines "health data" as data that identifies a consumer's past, present, or future mental or physical health status, and clarifies that health data is a form of sensitive data to be afforded heightened protections. The bill includes restrictions on the practice of geofencing around entities that provide in-person health care services or supplies when it is used to track a consumer, collect health data, or send notifications to consumers. The bill also includes a definition of the "share" or "sharing" of data, and states that health data cannot be sold or shared without the consumer's express prior consent.

Assumptions

The Attorney General's Office does not project any defined expenditures, absorbed costs, or revenues from these amendments. Civil investigations of alleged violations of these amendments would be pursued by the Office's existing attorneys and investigators dedicated to consumer protection issues.
