LEGISLATIVE MESSAGE

Message for February 1957

- 1. We in the United States are privileged to live under a government characterized by ideals of freedom and democracy, by principles of justice and equality of opportunity for all.
- 2. We believe that the maintenance of these principles is of paramount importance to our history and
- 3. There exists in the world forces which if given the opportunity would be destruction of these principles and would constitute a threat to the continued progress of our own American way of life.
- 4. Continued vigilance on the part of those who believe in our principles and a thorough understanding of their meaning and significance is vitally needed at this critical period in world history.
