

Proclamation

- WHEREAS: The dynamics between business and government today affect the state's prosperity and growth for years to come; and
- WHEREAS: It is crucial that managers define and influence an effective working relationship between business and government; and
- WHEREAS: The Carlson School of Management wishes to discover how business and education can cooperate to enhance the relationship between business and government; and
- WHEREAS: There are important financial, legal and ethical issues involved in the practices state and local governments use to attract business to Minnesota; and
- WHEREAS: Managers must be aware of how U.S. trade agreements and restrictions affect their ability to compete in an international marketplace; and
- WHEREAS: Minnesota businesses with operations in foreign countries must be aware of the affects of business-government relations abroad; and
- WHEREAS: The issue of government intervention in mergers takeovers and acquisitions increasingly requires examination; and
- WHEREAS: The enormous growth of business data banks has given rise to the issue of government intervention and maintaining data integrity; and
- WHEREAS: The Carlson School of Management is eager to recognize and celebrate the areas in which Minnesota businesses have successfully established a good working balance with state and local governments; and
- WHEREAS: The Carlson School of Management's annual business day promotes education on current business topics and practices through interaction among students, corporate representatives, alumni, faculty and staff;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Rudy Perpich, Governor of the State of Minnesota, do hereby proclaim April 18 through April 22 to be
