LEGISLATIVE REPORT

I. BACKGROUND AND SUMMARY

A. Enabling Legislation

In 2009, the Minnesota Legislature enacted groundbreaking legislation that authorized five cities (Saint Paul, Duluth, South Saint Paul, West Saint Paul and Inver Grove Heights) to establish a pilot driver's license reinstatement diversion program, referred to as the Driving Diversion Program (the "DDP"). The program permits an individual who has a suspended or revoked driver's license to obtain a valid driver's license while contemporaneously paying off outstanding fines and fees affecting the individual's driver's license status.¹ During the 2010 and 2011 legislative sessions the Minnesota Legislature enacted several changes to the pilot program; most notably, it extended the sunset date to June 30, 2013.

Since 2009, the Commissioner of Public Safety has been authorizing additional cities to join the DDP.

B. Driving After Suspension/Driving After Revocation – The Program Focus

In Minnesota, at any one time, it is estimated that more than 500,000 drivers are driving after the Department of Public Safety (the "DPS") has withdrawn their driving privileges. Driving after withdrawal charges are misdemeanor charges, which carry a potential sanction of up to $1,000 fine, ninety (90) days in jail or both.²

Driving After Suspension ("DAS") and Driving After Revocation ("DAR") citations constitute a significant portion of violations committed by non-licensed individuals consuming scarce resources of the prosecuting cities, counties and the judicial system. Once individuals lose their driving privileges, it is difficult for them to reinstate their driver's licenses. The fines and reinstatement fees accumulate and often are beyond the limited financial means of many of these individuals; their situations are often complicated by poor life choices. As a result, unlicensed drivers typically continue to drive and their plight worsens.

¹ Laws of Minnesota 2009, chapter 59, article 3, section 4; Laws of Minnesota 2010, chapter 197. See Appendix 1.

² However, it is common for individuals who drive with invalid licenses to also drive without insurance. No insurance and no proof of insurance charges are enhanceable and therefore may constitute gross misdemeanors under certain circumstances.

Typically, individuals find themselves with suspended or revoked driver's licenses because of their failure to appear for court, failure to pay outstanding traffic citations, failure to pay child support or to satisfy judgments. While this behavior is unacceptable, individuals engage in this behavior because they simply lack the financial means to pay what they owe. Inevitably, law enforcement officers stop these drivers for driving with suspended or revoked driver's licenses and issue new DAS and DAR citations. This endless cycle becomes very difficult to break.

Despite the possibility of criminal prosecution and the related administrative penalties, individuals with suspended and revoked driver's licenses continue to drive. They do so because of their need for reliable transportation and the fact that their economic situations make it difficult to obtain valid licenses. Moreover, given the judicial system's necessity to restructure priorities in the face of shrinking resources, the courts are forced to give these cases a lower priority.

Minnesota is not alone in its struggle to effectively deal with this seemingly endless cycle.³ However, Minnesota has taken the initiative to stop this cycle of behavior through the authorization of a license reinstatement diversion program, the DDP.

C. The Results: The License Reinstatement Diversion Pilot Program

Results of the pilot program continue to be very encouraging. Participation from suspended and revoked drivers has been very strong and the recidivism rate is extremely low at 6%. Not only has DDP benefited thousands of participants, but many Minnesota cities and counties have benefited along with the criminal justice system, Department of Revenue, Department of Public Safety (DPS) division of Driver and Vehicle Services (DVS). This program has promoted efficiency in criminal prosecution of DAS and DAR traffic citations and represents innovation within Minnesota's judicial system. Finally, the program is responsible for positive and unanticipated collateral effects.

II. THE DRIVING DIVERSION PROGRAM

A. How the DDP Works

The participating cities and counties have contracted with a third party administrator, Diversion Solutions, LLC, to develop and administer the DDP. When an officer in a pilot city issues a citation for DAS or DAR, the officer also issues a notice along with the DAS or DAR citation, which states that the driver may be eligible for participation in the DDP and directs the driver to contact Diversion Solutions, LLC. A driver may then contact Diversion Solutions, LLC and request admission into the program.

³ See generally Waller, Margy, Jennifer Doleac, and Ilsa Flanagan. Driver's License Suspension Policies. Brookings Institution, 2005 or http://www.aecf.org/upload/publicationfiles/license_all_reports.pdf

Diversion Solutions, LLC, in consultation with DPS/DVS and the appropriate prosecuting attorney, evaluates the driver's driving and criminal records and determines whether the driver is eligible for participation.⁴ After verification that the driver is eligible for the program and with prosecutor consent, the driver may join the program.

Upon acceptance, the driver, referred to as a "participant," must take part in a self-development, financial management and life skills course.⁵ The participant must also provide proof of insurance, which the participant must maintain during his or her participation in the DDP. After completion of the course and proof of a valid vehicle insurance policy, the participant then pays the reinstatement fee to the DVS and receives a valid driver's license. The individual's driving record contains a notation to law enforcement that the individual is a "Participant in Diversion Pilot Program" and thus subject to all of the conditions of the DDP.

Diversion Solutions, LLC develops a payment plan for each participant. Diversion Solutions, LLC places any outstanding court fines and fees that affect the participant's driver's license status into the payment plan. The program also charges a $350.00 participation fee which pays for all program-related services. Diversion Solutions, LLC provides the program services with the assistance of the city or county attorneys' offices, rather than repeatedly prosecuting these individuals. The typical participant has seven (7) outstanding citations and owes an average of $1,800 in outstanding fees and fines. The maximum length of any payment plan is eighteen (18) months. During the course of the repayment plan, the participant makes monthly payments to Diversion Solutions, LLC, which disburses these funds to the appropriate city or county agencies in order to satisfy all outstanding fees and fines affecting the participant's driver's license status.

A participant in the DDP must continually maintain valid vehicle insurance, remain law abiding and make regularly scheduled payments pursuant to the participant's supervised payment plan. Through Diversion Solutions, LLC personnel, the DDP maintains regular contact with and monitors participants on a monthly or bi-monthly basis until the participants have satisfied all of their respective program requirements. Ultimately, the prosecuting attorney dismisses the original DAS or DAR citation and upon satisfaction of all outstanding fines and fees affecting the participant's driver's license status, Diversion Solutions, LLC contacts DVS and the driver is eligible for a full reinstatement of his or her driving privileges.

In the event the participant fails to meet the DDP requirements, Diversion Solutions, ⁴ Any driver who has an active warrant is ineligible for participation in the DDP, as is any driver whose driver's license status is "suspended" due to unsatisfied judgments or unpaid child support. Moreover, any driver whose driver's license status is "revoked" for a DWI offense and who has not yet completed the revocation period associated with the DWI offense is ineligible for participation in the DDP.

⁵ The course materials are found in Appendix 2

LLC in consultation with the appropriate city or county attorney terminates the participant from the DDP, and notifies DVS. DVS then returns the participant's driver's license status to suspended or revoked, whichever the case may be.

In short, the DDP functions as a voluntary accountability and education program for participants.

B. The Problem and Why The DDP Works

The intent of the DDP is to help a driver who wants to take responsibility for his or her outstanding fines and fees and to drive legally while paying off those court fines and fees. It provides a participant with the opportunity to have a valid license and at the same time obligates and permits the participant to pay off all outstanding fines and fees affecting his or her driver's license.

Navigating the process of reinstating driving privileges is often a cumbersome and complicated process, particularly for drivers who owe significant fines and fees in multiple jurisdictions. The reinstatement process often means working with the Minnesota DPS - DVS, court administration and the Department of Revenue collection division. Given the number of agencies and the time involved with the reinstatement process, many drivers abandon the effort.

In addition to the often difficult reinstatement process, many drivers are never able to reinstate their driving privileges for financial reasons. First, most jobs require a valid license of all applicants. Consequently, employment is often beyond the reach of a driver who does not possess a valid driver's license. The stark reality is that a drivers' license is necessary for employment opportunities and meaningful participation in society. Without steady, gainful employment, the suspended or revoked driver lacks the means to obtain a valid driver's license. Second, many employed suspended or revoked drivers often work for minimum wage or little more than minimum wage and, as a result, they are financially unable to repay the outstanding fees and fines. The harsh reality is that many suspended or revoked drivers live paycheck to paycheck. Moreover, the financial stress these drivers experience is often compounded by poor life choices, including financial decisions.

In summary, the intent of the DDP is to provide a participant with a valid license status while simultaneously obligating and permitting the participant to pay off all outstanding fines and fees affecting his or her driver's license over a period of time. The DDP offers the incentive to suspended and revoked drivers that courts and prosecutors are currently unable to offer in their attempts to resolve DAS and DAR cases.

III. THE DRIVING DIVERSION PROGRAM (DDP)

A. Participation

Preliminary results of the pilot program are exceptional. Figure 1 summarizes the DDP participation statistics from 2009 through 2012. Of the 5,597 participants, 45 percent of participants⁶ have completed the course and provided proof of insurance. Most of these participants have also obtained a valid driver's license status conditioned upon their continued compliance with DDP requirements. An additional 26 percent of the participants have met eligibility requirements, but have yet to attend the class and fulfill the program requirements.

1108 individuals have successfully fulfilled the requirements of the DDP and have maintained valid insurance.⁷

B. Termination and Recidivism Rates for Participants

The recidivism rate for program participants is impressive. Just six percent of the participants who have completed the training course have continued to drive prior to obtaining a valid driver's license through the DDP⁸. This low recidivism rate is unexpected from this group of Minnesota drivers who chronically violate Minnesota law by driving with suspended or revoked licenses. This program shows great promise in removing traffic offenders from the court calendars, thereby saving significant court resources, while providing a solution to a problem that has seemingly escaped a solution.

Slightly more than two-thirds of the total program participants are in compliance with the DDP program requirements⁹. Accordingly, it is encouraging that just less than one third of the total participants have been terminated from the program for recidivism and failure to meet requirements, including failure to attend class or make payments as required.

C. Collection of Existing Unpaid Fines and Fees

The DDP is responsible for recovering significant outstanding fine and fee revenue that would otherwise remain uncollected. Figure 2 summarizes the fines and fees that the DDP has collected. As of December 31, 2012, the amount of outstanding fines paid back to the State of Minnesota, courts and cities is $1,450,500.26. The DDP is in the process of collecting in excess of $10,000,000 of fines owed by participants pursuant to the individual program payment plans¹⁰.

D. Positive Collateral Impact of the Program

In addition to keeping traffic offenders out of the courtroom, the DDP is responsible for the following unintended and unexpected, but nevertheless positive, effects:

- Voluntary clearance of active arrest warrants;
- Disposition of dormant DAS/DAR citations;
- Department of Revenue collection fees;
- Satisfaction of outstanding judgments¹¹; and
- Payment of child support arrears¹².

The interest in the DDP is so strong that prospective participants that are currently ineligible for the DDP often take the initiative to clear the impediments to participation, such as the active warrants, unsatisfied judgments and outstanding child support obligations so as to become eligible in the future.

¹¹ An individual is ineligible for the DDP when a judgment affects his or her driver's license status. Prospective participants are satisfying outstanding judgments that prevent them from program participation.

¹² An individual is ineligible for the DDP when child support arrears affect his or her driver's license status. Prospective participants are contacting County authorities to establish and abide by child support payment plans in order to enter the program.

IV. LEGISLATIVE RECOMMENDATIONS

The participating cities recommend that the Minnesota Legislature:

1. Continue the pilot program for two (2) additional years; and
2. Grant the Commissioner of Public Safety the authorization to allow an individual who owes the license reinstatement fee associated with a DWI offense to participate in the DDP once he or she has completed the revocation period associated with the DWI offense in order to regain valid license status.

V. CONCLUSION

For the reasons more fully described herein, the DDP should be continued due to the program's positive benefits to the public. The DDP has recovered outstanding fines and fees which the State of Minnesota and local governments arguably might not have otherwise recovered. This program is an innovative and unique approach that utilizes a public-private partnership without the support of tax payer dollars to solve the persistent and pervasive problem of unlicensed drivers. Because of its preliminary success, continued study is warranted.

ENACTED LEGISLATION

Sec. 4. LICENSE REINSTATEMENT DIVERSION PILOT PROGRAM.

Subdivision 1. Establishment. An eligible city may establish a license reinstatement diversion pilot program for holders of class D drivers' licenses who have been charged with violating Minnesota Statutes, section 171.24, subdivision 1 or 2, but have not yet entered a plea in the proceedings. An individual charged with driving after revocation under Minnesota Statutes, section 171.24, subdivision 2, is eligible for diversion only if the revocation was due to a violation of Minnesota Statutes, section 169.791; 169.797; 169A.52; 169A.54; or 171.17, subdivision 1, paragraph (a), clause (6). An individual who is a holder of a commercial driver's license or who has committed an offense in a commercial motor vehicle is ineligible for participation in the diversion pilot program.

Subd. 2. Eligible cities. Each of the cities of Duluth, St. Paul, South St. Paul, West St. Paul, and Inver Grove Heights is eligible to establish the license reinstatement diversion pilot program within its city. The commissioner of public safety may permit other cities to establish license reinstatement diversion pilot programs within their cities.

(2) the strength of the evidence against the individual, along with any mitigating factors; and
(3) the apparent ability and willingness of the individual to participate in the diversion program and comply with its requirements.

Subd. 5. Diversion driver's license. (a) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, the commissioner of public safety may issue a diversion driver's license to a person who is a participant in a pilot program for diversion, following receipt of an application and payment of:

(2) the reinstatement fee under Minnesota Statutes, section 171.29, subdivision 2, paragraph (a), by a participant whose driver's license has been revoked under Minnesota Statutes, section 169.791; 169.797; or 171.17, subdivision 1, paragraph (a), clause (6); or
(3) the reinstatement fee under Minnesota Statutes, section 171.29, subdivision 2, paragraph (a), by a participant whose driver's license has been revoked under Minnesota Statutes, section 169A.52 or 169A.54. The diversion driver's license may bear restrictions imposed by the commissioner suitable to the licensee's driving ability or other restrictions applicable to the licensee as the commissioner may determine to be appropriate to assure the safe operation of a motor vehicle by the licensee.

(b) Payments by participants in the diversion program of the reinstatement fee and surcharge under Minnesota Statutes, section 171.29, subdivision 2, paragraph (b), must be applied first toward payment of the reinstatement fee, and after the reinstatement fee has been fully paid, toward payment of the surcharge. - (3) comply with all traffic laws; and

(b) Upon termination of an individual's participation in the diversion program, the commissioner shall cancel the individual's diversion driver's license.

(c) The original charge against the individual of violation of Minnesota Statutes, section 171.24, may be reinstated against an individual whose participation in the diversion program terminates under paragraph (a), clause (1) or (2).

Dear Chairmen:

As directed by Minnesota session laws 2009, Chapter 59, Article 3, Section 4, I am pleased to be a part of the report on the progress and results of the Diversion Pilot Program.

Administered through Driver and Vehicle Services (DVS), the program has helped improve the safety of the motoring public by providing problem drivers with an option to regain valid driving privileges and obtain auto insurance. DVS has partnered with the participating cities, counties and Diversion Solutions, LLC, to work through program issues and are making changes to the "graduation criteria" to show a more accurate accounting of those who have successfully completed the program.

Continuation of the pilot program within established parameters is a DVS goal. We welcome your comments and questions. If you need further information, please do not hesitate to contact me or Patricia McCormack, Director of Driver and Vehicle Services at 651-201-7580.

Sincerely,

An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Duluth City Attorney's Office supports legislation that will expand the License Reinstatement Program throughout the State of Minnesota.

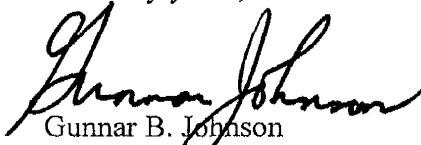

In 2009, the Duluth City Attorney's Office, along with the city attorney offices from St. Paul, Inver Grove Heights and West St. Paul, participated in a pilot program to get suspended and revoked Minnesota drivers reinstated. Prosecutors from the Duluth City Attorney's Office felt strongly at that time, and still do today, that some kind of intervention to break the cycle of unlicensed drivers routinely reoffending was needed. The prosecutors identified that many of the reoffending drivers were eligible to reinstate their driving privileges except for their inability to satisfy the financial requirements for reinstatement. Unlicensed drivers cited child care, employment needs, medical issues and the lack of access to the mass transit system as reasons they drove without a license. These unlicensed drivers continue to get caught, continue to receive a court fine and continue to get deeper in debt and further away from their ability to satisfy the financial requirements for driver's license reinstatement.

The Driver Diversion Program has had a positive impact in Duluth. It is an excellent tool to assist medium and low income individuals to earn their driving privileges back by paying off their financial requirements at a rate equal to their earning power. Participants in the Driver Diversion Program can legally drive for employment purposes, child care purposes and grocery shopping without incurring further fines and suspensions.

The Driver Diversion Program has not only made a positive impact on participants, the Driver Diversion Program has helped make our community safer by reintroducing licensed and insured drivers back onto our roadways. The court system is seeing fewer driving after suspension and driving after revocation tickets on the docket, which helps reduce case backlog. The Driver Diversion Program makes the participants accountable for their past behavior.

In conclusion, the City of Duluth and the Duluth City Attorney's Office fully support the Driver Diversion Program and legislation extending the License Reinstatement Diversion Program for the entire State of Minnesota. Please call me if you have any questions about this valuable program.

Sincerely yours,

Gunnar B. Johnson
City Attorney

RE: Legislative Support of Driving Diversion Pilot Program

Dear Committee Members:

As the City Attorneys and Police Chiefs for the Cities of Inver Grove Heights and West St. Paul, we write this letter in support of the Driving Diversion Program (DDP).¹

Since July 2009, our cities have collaborated with Diversion Solutions, LLC to develop and administer the DDP to assist those individuals who chronically drive with a revoked or a suspended driver's license.

This program has had a positive impact on our cities by increasing public safety and promoting efficiency within the Courts. For the reasons set forth below, we fully support proposed legislation to continue the pilot program for two (2) additional years.

The obvious benefits of this program have been:

- Increasing the number of validly licensed and insured drivers on Minnesota roads;
- Reducing the number of DAS/DAR cases in the state's judicial system; and
- Receiving outstanding fines and fees that otherwise would remain unpaid.

- Voluntary clearance of active arrest warrants;
- Disposition of dormant DAS/DAR citations;

Based upon the above-mentioned success, the Cities of Inver Grove Heights and West St. Paul fully support legislation to extend the Driving Diversion Pilot Program.

Dear Mr. Adkisson:

The Minneapolis City Attorney's Office supports legislation that not only continues the Driving Diversion Program in the current cities, including Minneapolis, but also supports legislation that would expand the program statewide.

The City of Minneapolis joined the Driving Diversion Program in 2010. Over the past several years, driving after revocation or cancellation offenses have comprised approximately 10-20% of our caseload. Many of these drivers were repeat offenders due to the fact that they could not meet the financial obligations needed to reinstate their license. These drivers continued to drive without a valid license. When given another citation, this simply added to the financial hurdle they already faced as they attempt to reinstate their driving privileges.

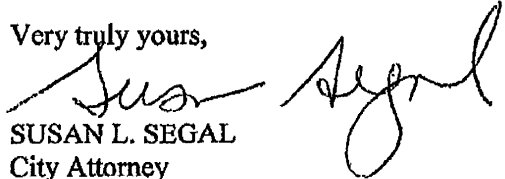

The Driving Diversion Program has had a positive impact in Minneapolis. Over the past three years, Minneapolis has had 1,116 participants approved for the program and over $383,000.00 in citations paid off through the program. The successful participants are not only driving with a valid license, but they are required to have valid insurance, which makes our roadways safer. This program has helped reduce the caseload both in court and at the Hennepin County Violations Bureau

The City of Minneapolis fully supports the Driving Diversion Program and the proposed legislation which would expand this program statewide.

RE: The License Reinstatement Diversion Pilot Program

Dear Committee Members:

As the City Attorney for the City of Saint Paul, I write this letter in support of the current legislation that will continue the existence of the License Reinstatement Diversion Pilot Program in the State of Minnesota.

Historical Background

In 2008, prosecutors from the cities of Saint Paul, Duluth, South Saint Paul, Inver Grove Heights and West Saint Paul met to discuss the issue of "chronic traffic offenders" (i.e. those individuals who chronically drive with a revoked or a suspended driver's license). These prosecutors recognized that unlicensed drivers, and the traffic crimes which they commit, made up a significant portion of their caseloads and consumed considerable judicial resources. They also noted that problems caused by chronic driving offenders were not being adequately addressed by the criminal justice system because all agencies were trying to do more with less. The prosecutors further found that although many of the chronic traffic offenders were eligible to have their driving privileges reinstated, they did not have the financial means to do so. Thus, in an effort to assist the chronic traffic offender in "breaking the cycle," the idea of the Driving Diversion Program was born.

How It Works

Since July 2009, the cities of Saint Paul, Duluth, South Saint Paul, Inver Grove Heights and West Saint Paul have collaborated with both the Department of Public Safety – Driver and Vehicle Services and Diversion Solutions, LLC to develop and to administer the Driving Diversion Program. The Driving Diversion Program has assisted numerous individuals who have been charged with driving after suspension/revocation (DAS or DAR) in their effort to earn back their driving privileges by requiring them to (1) adhere to a supervised payment plan; (2) attend a mandatory financial management and life skills course; (3) maintain valid vehicle insurance; and (4) obtain a valid driver's license.

Program Benefits

The Driving Diversion Program has had a positive impact on the City of Saint Paul and several other communities statewide.¹ As of December 31, 2012, approximately 2517 individuals have obtained a valid driver's license as a result of their participation in the Driving Diversion Program. The Driving Diversion Program has helped to make our streets and roadways safer by increasing the number of valid, insured drivers on the road. The program promotes efficiency within the state's judicial system by helping the chronic traffic offender "break out of the cycle." Finally, the Driving Diversion Program holds participants accountable for their past behavior by requiring them to pay off outstanding court fines and fees – most of which, arguably, would have never been paid.

Conclusion

The Saint Paul City Attorney's Office fully supports the continued success of the Driving Diversion Program. I respectfully request your support of this proposed legislation that will maintain the continued existence of the License Reinstatement Diversion Pilot Program throughout the State of Minnesota.

Very truly yours,

Sara Grewing
Saint Paul City Attorney

¹ Currently, there are approximately twenty-one cities and five counties who have been approved by the commissioner of public safety to participate in the DDP.

For the past four years, Diversion Solutions has been working closely with the pilot cities and DPS/DVS to support and streamline the Driving Diversion Program. This has been a great effort from all entities.

Over the course of this time, the program has reviewed over 10,000 individuals driving privileges (DVS reviews each individual as well.) Approximately 5400 individuals were allowed to participate in the program. The 4600 that were not eligible were given the proper information and contacts to correct their situation(s) which would then allow them to re attempt to re apply for the program.

A brief history on how this program was started; Diversion Solutions was approached in 2008 by five Pilot City Attorneys and asked to collaborate on the development of the Driving Diversion Program. The City Attorneys were seeking assistance in the development of a Diversion Program that would support offenders receiving Driving after Revocation (DAR) or Driving after Suspension (DAS) citations. At that time, these cases were 33% of their case loads in court. As each office was faced with budget cuts, they needed solutions that would benefit their departments with minimal risk.

While the program got off to a slow start, and we worked with the five original cities for the first two years, we ended 2012 with 21 cities and five counties participating in the program. We have paid off over 1.8 million dollars in fines for participants benefitting every county in MN.

As mentioned above, we have been fully involved with DDP from its conception to the actual management of the program, working closely with the five pilot cities, Department of Motor Vehicles and most recently, Court Administration and the Department of Revenue.

With your support we look forward to expanding DDP so we can assist more individuals in realizing the success of the program stands on licensed individuals driving and carrying insurance, payment of old fines and income generated to the state and cities.

Finally, we have developed this program without asking for any tax payer dollars. This program and its development have been paid for by Diversion Solutions and the participants, along with the hard work from our pilot City Attorney's and the Department of Driver Vehicles.

Respectfully,

Scott Adkisson

NEWS ARTICLES

Driver diversion effort deserves green light

Each year, thousands of Minnesotans lose their driver's license due to an illegal offense they have made after getting behind the wheel.

Not only is this a bad personal decision but it's also a bad financial choice. By the time you figure in the cost of higher car insurance payments and legal fees, not to mention the fine that could be imposed by the court, a person arrested for drunken driving could face bills totaling well over $10,000.

Eventually, that person will pay his debt to society. But he or she may not be able to pay their fines, and they may not be able afford the costs to have their driver's license reinstated.

With many families already facing reduced incomes if not outright job losses, financial hardships prevent these folks from becoming valid. Cities and counties also feel the pinch as the fines they had expected to collect are nowhere to be found.

Yet as many of us know, taking a person's driver's license

Tim Kelly

Minnesota District
28A Representative away does not always mean that person will not get behind the wheel.

Program started here

In 2009, a local businessman came up with a private solution that he felt could eliminate these problems.

Scott Adkisson, who is the president of Financial Crimes Services and Diversion Solutions, developed a plan allowing a person whose license had been suspended to drive legally, while also making sure they could pay off their citations.

The proposal was very simple: If a person had been charged with driving illegally because their license was suspended or revoked, they were offered the choice to receive a diversion driver's license. To receive it, the offender needed to prove he was paying for car insurance and making regular payments toward his court ordered fines. The offender would also have to pay for a class that teaches them life and financial management skills.

The pilot program was implemented in Red Wing. Later, Duluth, St. Paul, South St. Paul, West St. Paul and Inver Grove Heights signed up.

Two years later, and the pilot program has been a tremendous success.

According to some of the program statistics, 1,781 participants were eligible at the end of last year, of which the average had seven outstanding citations with an average balance of $1,700. It has returned nearly $500,000 back to the participating cities.

The problem is that without legislative approval, the program is going to come to an abrupt end June 30.

That's why I am carrying a bill in the Minnesota House that would not only continue the driver's license reinstatement diversion program for another two years, but could also expand it.

Under this bill, the program would continue operation until June 30, 2013. The Department of Public Safety would determine which cities were eligible, and it could also allow counties to participate. There's even a possibility the program could be open to communities statewide.

Moving forward

Not surprisingly, the updated proposal has been well received, sailing through the House Public Safety and Crime Prevention Policy and Finance Committee, as well as the Transportation Policy and Finance Committee.

I expect a House floor debate on the diversion program bill in the next two weeks.

This is an excellent example of the private sector being able to accomplish a task much more efficiently than the government. There are times when people in the private sector have to think outside the box and come up with a solution that isn't necessarily tried and true.

Adkisson did just that, and his private solution might someday be available to any city or county in Minnesota.

The program is a win for communities who, without it, would continue to be owed thousands of dollars. It has also been extremely beneficial to those who want to legally regain their driver's license but may not have the financial ability to make that happen.

Though the program needs government approval, there is no question that this private sector solution is being handled more effectively and efficiently than most people within the current system expected, and I am happy to give the driver's license reinstatement diversion program my full support.

The Driving Diversion Program (DDP)
June 18, 2009

The Saint Paul City Attorney's Office is pleased to announce the creation of the Driving Diversion Program ("DDP"), which was authorized by the 2009 Minnesota Legislature as a pilot program and becomes effective July 1, 2009. The details of the DDP are currently being developed with the Department of Public Safety and our partner pilot cities (Duluth, Inver Grove Heights, South Saint Paul and West Saint Paul). Working through Financial Crimes Services, LLC, the new pilot diversion program seeks to assist individuals who have been charged with driving without a valid license to earn back their valid license status through a supervised payment plan, a mandatory financial management and life skills course, and the issuance of a temporary diversion license.

You MAY be eligible for the Driving Diversion Program (DDP) IF:

1. You have received a citation for Driving After Suspension (DAS) or Driving After Revocation (DAR);
2. The offense took place in the City of St. Paul;
3. Your case is still "pending" (i.e. you have NOT yet paid the fine amount for that citation and/or you have NOT yet pled guilty to that offense); and
4. You have a Class D driver's license.

Individuals who hold a commercial driver's license or who were driving a commercial vehicle at the time of the offense are NOT eligible for this program.

If you think that you are eligible to participate in this program and would like more information, please contact:

Before July 1, 2009: Assistant St. Paul City Attorney Jessica McConaughy at 651-266-8740.

After July 1, 2009: Financial Crimes Services, LLC (FCS) at 1-866-518-2597.

When you contact us, please have the following information available:

1. Your full name and date of birth
2. Your citation number or court case number (MNCIS number)
3. The date of your offense.

The Driving Diversion Program: What Is It?

By: Jessica McConaughy, Assistant St. Paul City Attorney

You may (or may not) be familiar with the recently created Driving Diversion Program (DDP) that has been implemented in five Minnesota cities. The idea behind the DDP was developed by prosecutors from the cities of St. Paul, Duluth, West St. Paul, South St. Paul and Inver Grove Heights. The prosecutors from these cities recognized that unlicensed drivers, and the traffic crimes which they commit, make up a significant portion of their caseloads and consume considerable judicial resources. They also realized that problems caused by chronic driving offenders were not being adequately addressed by the criminal justice system because all agencies were being asked "to do more with less. Because they believed that there had to be a better way to resolve these cases, they worked with several legislators to create a pilot diversion program to address those individuals who continue to drive with a revoked or a suspended driver's license. As such, the idea behind the DDP was conceived.

Early on, these prosecutors realized that they could not undertake such a project without the help of the State and/or an outside agency to administer the program. The group met with representatives from the DPS - Driver and Vehicle Services Division and gained their support for the project. Simultaneously, the group worked with Financial Crimes Services, LLC (FCS) to help develop and to administer the program. In August 2009, after numerous meetings and planning sessions, the DDP officially launched.

Is Dust-Off A Hazardous Substance?

By: Bill Lemons, Traffic Safety Resource Prosecutor

On July 6, 2009, a teenager crashed his car into a tree. By his own admission, he hit the tree going the 30 mile per hour speed limit. The amount of damage suggests the car was going significantly faster. The two passengers were severely injured and taken to the hospital. They told the police that the driver was inhaling Dust-Off while driving and saw him pass out just before the crash. One of the passengers tried to take control of the vehicle, but did not have time. The police obtained a blood sample from the driver and asked the BCA to test for the impairing substance in Dust Off. The blood test was positive.

The prosecutor reviewed the case and charged the driver with two counts of Criminal Vehicular Operation based upon gross negligence.

You might be asking, "what about charges of CVO and DWI based upon impairment of a hazardous substance?" Was the case charged properly? The prosecutor came across a large hole in the DWI statute.

How It Works

Working through FCS, the DDP seeks to assist individuals who have been charged with driving after suspension/revocation (DAS or DAR) to earn back their valid license status through a supervised payment plan, a mandatory financial management and life skills course, and the issuance of a temporary diversion license.

FCS and each participant create a monthly payment plan to pay off ALL existing unpaid fines and reinstatement fees that are affecting his/her driver's license status. Participants are given a valid DDP driver's license allowing them to legally drive while they are successfully enrolled in the DDP.

Failure to abide by the program's conditions, including monthly payment plan payments, valid insurance, and good driving conduct, will result in an immediate loss of the DDP license and the person will revert back to their original suspension or revocation status and potential prosecution on the original charge(s).

Who can participate?

The DDP was not created to be a "clean slate" program. Many drivers simply will not qualify for the program. The DDP focuses on drivers with a suspended or a revoked driver's license. A driver who is charged with DAS or DAR may be eligible to participate IF:

1. The offense occurred in one of the five participating pilot cities;
2. The case is still "pending" (i.e. the driver has NOT yet paid the fine amount for that citation and/or the offender has NOT yet pled guilty to that offense); and
3. The offender has a Class D driver's license.

Ultimately, however, the prosecutor retains the discretion of whether an offender is admitted to the program.

What is law enforcement's role?

Officers who issue citations to drivers for DAS or DAR also provide the drivers with an orange colored DDP card. The DDP card provides information about the program and includes the toll-free number of FCS.

What is the driver's responsibility?

If the driver is interested in the DDP, the driver is responsible for contacting FCS within 72 hours of receipt of the citation and FCS determines initial eligibility. If the driver chooses NOT to contact FCS about the DDP, the citation proceeds through the criminal justice system.

What happens if the driver fails to complete the DDP?

If a participant fails to comply with the program requirements, FCS notifies the prosecuting attorney of the participant's termination from the program. The prosecutor then has the discretion to "re-charge" the initial offense(s) by formal complaint.

Conclusion

The DDP is an innovative solution to an age old problem: the chronic traffic offender who drives without a valid license. The DDP addresses the chronic traffic offender's major issue – their financial inability to pay one large, lump sum to reinstate their driving privileges. We understand that this program cannot and should not be able to help all unlicensed drivers. However, the DDP can work for those people who want it. The pilot cities, along with the commissioner of public safety, will report the results of the program to the legislature by February 1, 2011. We look forward to sharing those results with you at that time.

A carrot-and-stick approach to helping suspended drivers

St. Paul, Duluth and other cities will test a new approach aimed at helping motorists earn back their licenses.

By PAT PHEIFER, Star Tribune

Last update: June 15, 2009 - 11:27 PM

The ideal candidates don't have a valid driver's license -- and maybe haven't had one for quite a while. But they still need to drive to work, to the grocery store, to pick up the kids at day care.

Every time they're stopped, they get another driving-after-suspension citation, another fine and another court fee. The fines and fees can quickly add up to thousands of dollars.

A pilot program set to begin July 1 in St. Paul, West St. Paul, South St. Paul, Inver Grove Heights and Duluth offers a carrot-and-stick approach to help those drivers get legal. The Minnesota Department of Public Safety limited the number of cities to participate initially, but Minneapolis and other cities may be allowed to join later.

The cities will work with Financial Crimes

Services, a private company based in Red Wing, and the state Department of Public Safety (DPS). Participants, who will be chosen by prosecutors, will receive a "diversion license," similar in all respects to a regular driver's license except to those behind the scenes. A bill approved by the Legislature this spring allows the DPS to issue such a license. In the past, a driver had to pay all outstanding fines and fees up front before they could get their license back.

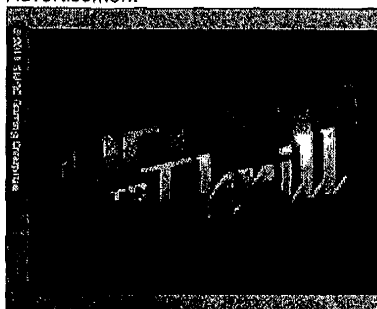

State records show that more than 14,000 Minnesotans have been ticketed at least five times for driving without a valid driver's license since January 1997. That includes 107 people who have been ticketed more than 20 times.

Some of those individuals will be eligible for the pilot program. Those with more serious offenses on their record won't. Organizers still have some details to work out, but Scott Adkisson, president of Financial Crimes Services, said he anticipates serving about 7,000 people in the first 18 months.

No cost to taxpayers

The program won't cost taxpayers a dime, organizers said. The participants will pay a $150 fee to Financial Crimes Services. They must take a class on budgeting, financial management and life skills. In return, the company will determine how much is owed and to whom and set up a payment plan that's within their budget. Adkisson said the company is working with an insurance company to allow participants to make monthly, rather than annual or biannual, payments for auto insurance. Participants also will get a special checking account to help them reestablish credit.

"It's like having people," said Kori Land, city attorney for West St. Paul, South St. Paul and Inver Grove Heights. "Everybody needs people. These are their people."

So what's the stick? Participants who don't follow through with the program could be prosecuted, organizers said.

Rep. Tony Cornish, R-Good Thunder, who is police chief in Lake Crystal, spoke in favor of the bill at a hearing in the House on March 10. "Usually I'm for locking everybody up and throwing away the keys," he said. "Especially if it's a bonehead out there trying to prove his or her authority by driving on a suspended license just because they can."

"But in this case, a number of officers have relayed to me that it's like you said, a revolving wheel. They get three, four, five tickets and they get picked up and the trooper or whoever says, 'Why are you out here driving?' and he or she says, 'I gotta get to work.' Some of them are just a victim of the process and they'd like to change the cycle."

The fine for one driving-after-suspension citation is $200 plus court costs, but multiple citations, late fees and penalties can ultimately land people in debt for thousands of dollars.

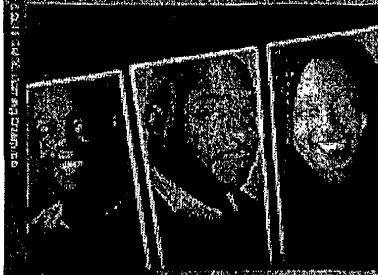

Breaking the cycle

The pilot program's goal is to break that cycle and ultimately save time and money for a court system that's already stretched thin by budget cuts.

St. Paul City Attorney John Choi said last week that his office handles about 15,000 cases a year and about a third of those are traffic-related. The current system, he said, treats traffic offenses as a "collection matter" and creates a revolving door for those who really want to get a valid license and chronic repeat offenders alike.

"If we want to focus on outcomes, what we really need to do is very strategically look at who's coming into the system, look at who we can prevent from coming back into the system and separate out those who need to be prosecuted," Choi said.

Drivers can lose their license for having an unpaid speeding ticket, unpaid child support, no proof of insurance and myriad other infractions. People charged with one alcohol-related offense, such as drunken driving, are eligible to participate if they have completed their punishment and the only thing left for them to do is pay the fines and fees.

The program isn't for folks like, oh, R.T. Rybak, for example. The Minneapolis mayor drove without a valid license for nearly three months in 2008 -- his license had been suspended because he failed to pay the full amount of a 2006 speeding ticket. He paid up in mid-May 2008, and his license was reinstated.

"If this is your first one, you're better off just paying the fine and being done with it," Choi said. "But the actual scenario in a lot of these cases is they're driving because they have these outstanding fees and they can't pay them off."

'A promising idea'

The Legislature approved the pilot program for two years; it must be revisited in 2011. Although the city of Minneapolis is not part of the initial program, City Attorney Susan Segal said a provision was added to the bill that allows other cities to join it in the future.

"I do think it is a promising idea and potentially a more effective response than what we're doing currently on these cases," Segal said. "We'll review the pilot and if that appears as promising as it should be we would be interested in joining."

The numbers in Minneapolis are similar to those in the cities participating in the program -- about one-third of the cases handled in any given year are traffic offenses, Segal said.

The numbers are similar in Land's territory.

"These are not bad people, they just make some bad choices," Land said.

"My brother gave me some advice when I started prosecution: Put the bad guys in jail but let the good guys go. That's how I see this program."

MAKING UNLICENSED DRIVERS LEGAL

PILOT DIVERSION PROGRAM TACKLES COMMON PROBLEM WITH INTERVENTION

Nick Ferrara

nferraro@pioneerpress.com

Local prosecutors and law enforcement officials say driving without a valid license is an offense they see often, and many times the same people are being caught over and over again.

In many cases, drivers get back behind the wheel because they don't have the money to pay the hefty fines, said Kori Land, city attorney in South St. Paul and West St. Paul.

Help is around the corner for drivers who get their licenses suspended or revoked after an offense in St. Paul, Duluth, Inver Grove Heights, South St. Paul and West St. Paul.

"These are people who get caught in a system that they cannot get out of or don't know how to get out of," Land said.

A two-year pilot program that begins July 1 is aimed at helping eligible drivers get valid licenses again by putting them into a payment plan and giving them a temporary license.

St. Paul City Attorney John Choi's office initiated the driving diversion program, which was included in the state's public safety omnibus bill that passed in May.

Choi said more than one-third of the cases presented to the St. Paul city attorney's office each year involve drivers who don't have valid licenses or who don't have insurance, which often go hand in hand.

"We found that essentially a lot of these individuals would be offered the opportunity to pay a fine, but they wouldn't pay the fine," Choi said. "And guess what happens then? Their license will get suspended again."

Driving after suspension or revocation are payable offenses that carry a $200 fine, plus a $75 surcharge. However, the offenses are considered misdemeanors, so if a driver goes to court and loses, they carry a maximum punishment of 90 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Here's how the program will work:

A prosecutor will determine whether to accept someone into the program and consider factors such as criminal history.

Participants must pay a $150 fee to enter the program, which would allow their most recent fine to be dropped. They would have to pay their old fines and fees, however, through a payment schedule that would allow them to spread out the cost. They also must complete a four-hour education class and provide proof of insurance.

Drivers can obtain a valid license and insurance through the program. Once completed, the latest citation will be dismissed, and it will not show up on a driving record.

Someone with a drunken driving offense might be eligible for the program after serving out the revocation period. Those who have commercial licenses or have multiple drunken driving offenses, misdemeanors or child endangerment offenses will not be eligible.

Financial Crime Services, a private vendor out of Red Wing, Minn., that also handles the "worthless check" program for St. Paul and several other cities, will manage the program.

The state commissioner of public safety and staff from the five communities must report back to legislative committees with results of the program, including recidivism rates, by February 2011.

Land said the goal, besides helping people to drive legally, is to free up the court calendars.

"The biggest complaint from judges and public defenders and court staff is the volume," Land said. "So if we can reduce the volume of the court calendars by just eliminating a third of these tickets, it will help."

Editorial: Breaking the cycle of lost licenses

New program should benefit drivers and courts.

Last update: June 22, 2009 - 10:40 AM

One Minnesota driver ignores a series of parking tickets, another neglects to deal with old speeding violations, and a third falls behind on child support. All three lose their driver's licenses, but they continue to drive and rack up more fines.

A soon-to-start pilot program may give drivers like these -- and the courts that prosecute them -- some relief. Beginning July 1, five Minnesota cities will try an innovative approach to help such drivers pay the fines over time, drive legally and reduce the burden on the enforcement, collections and court systems.

St. Paul, South St. Paul, West St. Paul, Inver Grove Heights and Duluth will offer the option of a "diversion license" -- provided violators pay a $150 fee, take some financial management classes and agree to a payment plan to pay off previous fines. Even including the fee, that approach is cheaper for the driver than repeatedly getting fines that can run into the hundreds and thousands of dollars.

The program allows motorists to have driving privileges while they pay off their debts. Under current law, violators have to pay the fines before licenses can be restored. When those in the program can drive legally, the city court system is less bogged down with repeat cases.

Cities in the pilot program will work with Financial Crimes Services, a private Red Wing-based company that will collect the fee and offer the classes. The Department of Public Safety will issue a "diversion license" that looks like a regular license but has special coding to indicate that it is provisional. During the 2009 session, the Legislature approved a bill to create the pilot program and allow DPS to issue the licenses.

The program is not for repeat DUI offenders or those with a single violation. Rather, it's designed to help those who have had multiple problems with driving without a license. Police confirm that many violators aren't on the road because they want to break the law, but because they have limited or no other transportation options. To earn a living, care for their families and live productive lives, they must get behind the wheel. Some live in areas where public transportation is limited or unavailable.

In addition to individual drivers, the court system and taxpayers should reap benefits. The program doesn't cost the state anything, and it should save money in the long run.

State records indicate that more than 14,000 Minnesotans have been ticketed at least five times for driving without a valid driver's license since January 1997. St. Paul City Attorney John Choi, who along with other city attorneys brought the idea to the Legislature, said St. Paul handles about 5,000 traffic-related cases annually.

The current system, he said, treats the violation like a "collections matter" that doesn't separate out those who really need to be prosecuted from others, who with a little support and direction, can pay their fines and be allowed to drive legally.

Five cities will participate initially in the two-year pilot program, but the legislation leaves the door open to add more. Minneapolis and several other cities have indicated interest.

The diversion license is a creative way to address two problems: restoring driver's licenses and reducing license violations. If the pilot program is successful, it could be a cost-effective model for other cities and counties.

Working through Financial Crime Services, LLC, the new pilot diversion program seeks to assist individuals who have been charged with driving without a valid license to earn back their valid license status through a supervised payment plan, a mandatory financial management and life skills course, and the issuance of a temporary diversion license.

You MAY be eligible for the Driving Diversion Program (DDP) IF:

1. You have received a citation for Driving After Suspension (DAS) or Driving After Revocation (DAR);
2. The offense took place in the City of Duluth;
3. Your case is still "pending" (i.e. you have NOT yet paid the fine amount for that citation and/or you have NOT yet pled guilty to that offense); and
4. You have a Class D driver's license.

Individuals who hold a commercial driver's license or who were driving a commercial vehicle at the time of the offense are NOT eligible for this program.

If you think that you are eligible to participate in this program and would like more information, please contact:

Before July 1, 2009: Duluth Assistant City Attorney Cary Schmies (218) 730-5490.

After July 1, 2009: Financial Crimes Services, LLC (FCS) at 1-866-518-2597.

When you contact us, please have the following information available:

1. Your full name and date of birth
2. Your citation number or court case number (MNCIS number)
3. The date of your offense

More information about this program will be posted on this website as it becomes available.

Dakota County program helps repentent drivers stop spinning their wheels

By Nick Ferraro

Two years ago, Dominic Kielas Jr. was in a jam: pay his mortgage on time or pay a $200 speeding ticket.

Kielas chose the mortgage and eventually found himself with a suspended driver's license, which led to another quandary for the general contractor: drive to job sites or don't work.

"I was stuck," said Kielas, 24, of Minnetonka. "I had to drive."

He racked up more than $4,500 in fines and tow fees after being stopped 15 times for driving after suspension, including once in St. Paul.

"I think — I know — that 90 percent of those were when I was going or coming back from work," he said. "It was out of control."

But Kielas is back behind the wheel legally because of an innovative program implemented a year ago in five pilot cities that allows those with suspended or revoked licenses to drive while they pay off fines.

The two-year pilot program, set in motion in July 2009, is generating praise from participants and city and state officials.

"I'm certainly supportive," state Public Safety Commissioner Michael Campion said. "We can only go off a year, but by all accounts, there's been some very positive outcomes."

The St. Paul city attorney's office initiated the driving diversion program, which was included in the state's public-safety omnibus bill, for St. Paul, Inver Grove Heights, West St. Paul, South St. Paul and Duluth.

The legislation allows for more cities to establish their own programs and several, including Minneapolis, have shown interest in doing so, said Scott Adkisson, owner and president of Judicial Administrative Support Services, the Red Wing-based company that manages the program.

Campion said he's heard talk behind the scenes of the program going statewide.

"Adding it statewide might make sense," he said. "I think the interest is there on many fronts."

Officials say the program, which comes at no cost to taxpayers, has been more popular and successful than anticipated.

So far, 1,200 people have been accepted into the program — nearly four times what officials predicted, Adkisson said. Participants must pay a $300 program fee at the start.

Four hundred thirty people were rejected because they did not qualify.

People who had a commercial driver's license or a drunken driving conviction within the past 12 months are ineligible, as are those who owe child support or unpaid legal judgments.

"If they clean up their judgments or child support, we can help them," Adkisson said.

Of those accepted, 80 percent are making payments on time and have not received additional moving citations, Adkisson said.

"I think the low dismissal rate points to the success of the program," said Darcy Erickson, assistant city attorney for Inver Grove Heights, South St. Paul and West St. Paul. "And that ultimately means people are paying fines that might not otherwise have been paid."

On average, each participant has entered the program with eight to 10 unpaid citations and about $1,600 in fines, Adkisson said.

The returns suspended or revoked drivers receive are obvious: They can drive legally again while erasing nagging debt.

But city prosecutors and the court systems also get relief, by handling fewer cases, Erickson said.

Before the program, more than one-third of the cases presented to the city attorney's offices in the pilot cities involved drivers who lacked valid licenses or car insurance, which often go hand in hand.

So far, Adkisson said, 30 people have "graduated" from the program — completed the four-hour class, got insurance, stayed out of trouble and paid their fines in full. Getting their licenses reinstated and their latest citation dismissed was their reward.

The success apparently extends after the program. "As far as we know, the graduates have not had additional violations," Adkisson said.

The state public safety commissioner and the five communities will report back to legislative committees with results of the program, including recidivism rates, by February.

On a recent Thursday evening, 16 people arrived at West St. Paul City Hall for the class — their final requirement before driving legally. One by one, friends and family dropped them off at the front door.

"I've heard just about every story from people as to why they're here," said instructor Mike Lewis, a former Faribault police chief. "You see people in here from all walks of life — and most say they got caught in the trap and couldn't get out. This brings it together for them."

Over the next four hours, participants were given a lesson on the laws and penalties regarding driving without a license and even advice on how to check credit scores and manage their finances.

Maurice Davis, who hasn't driven legally for 14 years, said the program is worth the effort.

"I'm excited to drive again legally, not that it ever stopped me before," said Davis, 49, of St. Paul. "But I have to do what I have to do."

Davis, who must pay $96 for each of the next 17 months before getting his license reinstated, added, "It's probably going to save me money in the long

Pilot program benefits state drivers, cities

Alex Holmquist
Review staff

Wednesday, June 30, 2010

Trying to reinstate your driver's license after suspension or revocation can be tough, but some Minnesotans have been given a break.

The Driving Diversion Program, designed to help drivers get back on the road legally, was implemented last year as a pilot program in St. Paul, West St. Paul, Inver Grove Heights, South St. Paul and Duluth.

The program also aims to lessen the burden on court systems bogged down by cases involving drivers who don't have a valid license or insurance.

Before the program, more than one-third of the cases presented to the city attorney's offices in the pilot cities involved drivers without a valid license or insurance, said Scott Adkisson, CEO and president of Judicial Administrative Support Services, the company that manages the program.

That number has been decreasing as a result of the program.

How it works

When a driver without a valid license is pulled over, police give him a card with information about how to enter the program.

Once enrolled, participants can drive legally while they pay off their fines and a $300 program fee in monthly installments. They are also required to obtain insurance on their vehicles and take a four-hour class.

Upon completion of the program, the city attorney will forgive the citation that brought them to the program, and in some cases may give them a break on previous citations as well.

Not everyone qualifies for the program, including those who are pulled over for DWI or those involved in serious crashes. People who owe child support or other unpaid legal judgments are also ineligible.

However, Adkisson said JASS is willing to work with those who are ineligible by providing them a process to take to become eligible.

"The whole system is built on support," Adkisson said.

If someone fails to complete the program for any reason, all prior payments are put toward paying off fines, but the $300 program fee is non-refundable.

Benefits for drivers

Deonte Phillips, a 25-year-old St. Paul resident, enrolled in the program after having his license suspended for unpaid parking and speeding tickets.

Phillips said being able to drive while he makes monthly payments on his fines is vital, since the job he's applying for requires a valid driver's license.

Phillips will be making monthly payments of $182 a month for 18 months instead of having to pay a big lump sum before getting his license back.

"Everyone can't afford to pay their tickets all at once," Phillips said. "This helps a lot of people out."

He added that the city attorney will be dropping four of his tickets upon his completion of the program, and none of them will go on his driving record.

"It's like a blessing that they give people second chances," he said.

Adkisson said the program, which operates at no cost to taxpayers, usually saves participants about $400, even after they pay the program fee.

The program also saves the court system valuable time and resources because it doesn't have to prosecute as many cases involving drivers without a valid license. On average, the cost for the city to prosecute a case is $175, and the savings have been adding up as more people take advantage of the program, Adkisson said.

A year in review

The program will be hitting its one-year mark next week, and Adkisson said its success has exceeded his expectations.

"It has been phenomenal," he said.

Adkisson added that he had hoped for a 15 percent success rate when the program was first implemented, but was pleasantly surprised by the program's 85 percent success rate. Additionally, the 1,300 people enrolled in the program are substantially more than the 350 he initially anticipated.

Lt. Brian Sturgeon of the West St. Paul Police Department said the program benefits people who are motivated to get their life in order but may not have the immediate financial means to regain their license.

He added that lots of people are taking advantage of the program in West St. Paul, and that the two monthly classes are always full.

"People are very receptive to it," Sturgeon said.

In January, JASS will present the results of the pilot program to the state legislature, and Adkisson said he expects the program to be implemented statewide by June 2011 if its success continues.

"It would be great if they could do it everywhere," Phillips added.

Win-win relationships

Financial Crimes Services includes theft diversion program, juvenile tobacco pilot program

By Mike Longaecker

Try convincing people there is such a thing as a free lunch.

Now compound that struggle by selling it to law enforcement officials — a group fundamentally rooted in skepticism.

That difficult prospect was just what Scott Adkisson attempted in 2000 when he pitched a check diversion program that would cost municipalities nothing and help businesses recoup lost funds.

"At first, no one could understand that," said Adkisson, president and CEO of Red Wing-based Financial Crimes Services.

Eventually the idea caught on, but it took almost two years longer to pick up steam than Adkisson expected.

"We had to put the proof into it," he said.

Eight years and 650 Minnesota communities later, Adkisson knows he has made believers of them.

Since the theft diversion program's launch,

Financial Crimes Services has expanded services to include a property crimes diversion program.

A juvenile tobacco diversion program is under way in Red Wing as a pilot program. Another Financial Crimes Services pilot program gaining interest is juvenile drug diversion, which Adkisson said is seeing success in Green Bay, Wis.

Yet another new Financial Crimes Services program under development would help counties recoup outstanding funds sought through driving-after-revocation cases. The program also would allow violators to receive temporary licenses, which Adkisson said helps put them back to work.

The plan could mean a spur to the economy, he said.

Adkisson said Ramsey County work force officials have jobs that are going unfilled due to workers being ineligible to drive.

Adkisson said the driving-after-revocation program is on the cusp of going statewide and has already arranged $1.1 million in fine payback promises.

"We clean up for the courts and the state," he said.

Adkisson runs the business out of the company's home office in Red Wing, a location he keeps under tight wraps due to security concerns. Adkisson said he moved the business to Red Wing from Andover, Minn., after police Chief Tim Sletten pitched him the idea of relocating here while the two fished on the Mississippi River.

After receiving a tour of the town from Red Wing Port Authority officials, he was sold.

"Geographically, it just made sense to do business in Red Wing," Adkisson said.

He was also drawn by the reputation of small-town work ethics.

"It still holds true," Adkisson said.

The Red Wing location employs 22 people. Other offices, including a secondary location in Milwaukee, brings total employment to 44 workers.

Adkisson said the business was borne out of a friend's need for help. That friend, John McCullough — who still serves as Adkisson's silent partner — needed a system to support merchants who were victims of bad checks.

Adkisson, a software developer, created a program to do just that.

"That's how this whole thing developed," he said. The company's philosophy has been to seek win-win relationships between government, taxpayers and offenders.

"These are not punishment programs," Adkisson said. "These are built to help you succeed."

How does Financial Crimes Services work?

By Mike Longaecker
mlkel@republican-eagle.com

So just how do programs at Financial Crimes Services work?

Consider one of the latest creations — a pilot program initiated in Red Wing for property crimes.

The program applies to people cited for low-level criminal property damage or shoplifting incidents.

Participants join the program voluntarily once police and Goodhue

County prosecutors verify their eligibility. Any prior convictions or participation in other diversion programs means immediate disqualification and a citation is issued.

Financial Crimes Services runs participants through up to five hours of classes developed to show them where they're headed if they "stay on the path," said Scott Adkisson, CEO and president of the company.

Participants stay in the program until full restitution is paid. Adkisson said the program gives participants a long leash to make payments, if dollars are hard to come by.

"It's not as much a punishment as it is a support mechanism to help you," he said.

Successful entrants will be kept in a diversion database but their criminal offense will be not be kept in court records, provided all requirements have been satisfied.

The program does come at a cost for participants — $100 for juveniles and $200 for adults. Goodhue County Attorney Stephen Betcher said his office has been told the cost has kept some would-be participants away.

But when compared to the cost of court appearance and attorney fees, he said the cost is worth paying.

"The reality is that people are very economically distressed at this time," Betcher said.

Program helps drivers reinstate licenses

Success rate far exceeds expectations

RED WING — Starting Wednesday at noon, Goodhue County will join a growing list of communities involved in a pilot program to get people with suspended or revoked driver's licenses back on the road safely and legally.

The Driving Diversion Program has been wildly successful since the 2009 Legislature approved it, and developer Scott Adkisson says the pilot program has generated interest as far away as California and New Hampshire.

Adkisson said the success-rate target was 15 percent when the program began but that nearly 70 percent of its 2,960 participants either have graduated or are on track to graduate.

"And here's the good part: It doesn't cost the city anything; it doesn't cost the county anything," Adkisson said.

The program was approved for trial in five Twin Cities-area communities. The expansion involves an additional 12 cities and five counties. It could be approved as a statewide program next year, which Adkisson says could raise $30 million through fine collection. It has helped secure $1.4 million to date.

How it works

The premise is fairly simple. About 500,000 Minnesota drivers don't have a valid license or insurance, but about a third of them continue to, illegally, operate a vehicle. For a fee of $350, drivers may enroll in an 18-month class that allows them to continue driving — often to work — while completing the state requirements to be re-licensed.

The program has minimum requirements, which typically include a payment plan for fines. Drivers who have been charged with crimes such as criminal vehicular operation, fleeing an officer or auto theft can't enroll.

The average participant has seven citations and a balance of $1,700 in fines and fees. That indicates a clear need for the program, Adkisson said.

Red Wing Police Chief Tim Sletten and city council member Lisa Bayley concurred Monday evening.

"I have so many clients who can use this program," said Bayley, an attorney. "It's a huge issue. I think it's fantastic."

Sletten said that the program "fills a void that badly needs to be dealt with."
