1 Introduction

This report is a summary of homestead property values and property taxes. It profiles 20 regions in Minnesota based on residential homestead property tax (payable in 2013) and income (earned in 2012). The information in this report makes basic comparisons of income and property taxation possible. Still, numerous factors, including policy decisions unique to each region, affect property taxes. They make true comparisons among regions difficult and correlations among the data even more challenging.

1.1 General information

The 2008 Legislature appropriated one-time funding for the Department of Revenue to develop and maintain a property tax and income-earned database for Minnesota homeowners. The first Residential Homestead Property Tax Burden Report was published in 2009 using that database. This is the fifth publication. The department maintains the database and provides ongoing periodic reports. The report can be found online at www.revenue.state.mn.us. Just type "Property Tax Burden Report" in the Search box.

The database is often called the "Voss Database" after Rep. Gordon Voss, who sponsored the 1987 legislation that first mandated this kind of data collection.

1.2 Important factors that determine homestead property taxes

The property tax levied on a homestead depends on many factors. Among the most important ones are:

- Level of public services: The level of public spending varies across the state. Generally, more and better services mean higher property taxes. Townships generally provided fewer services than cities. Community size and density, population age, and crime levels are a few of the things that affect community preferences for public goods and services.
- Intergovernmental aid and use of other non-property tax resources: The level of state and federal aid to local governments can raise or lower property taxes. So can the amount of revenue generated by fees, charges, local sales taxes, and other non-property revenue sources.
- Tax base composition and property tax classification system: The amount of property tax generated by commercial, industrial, cabin, farm, and other non-homestead property types, can affect a homeowner's property tax bill. Significant property tax revenue coming from these properties generally results in lower property tax bills for homeowners.
- Property tax refunds: Property tax refunds lower homestead property taxes.

- Regional economy: The regional and local economies affect the mix of properties, market values, jobs, wages, and the supply and demand for housing.
- Assessment practices: Fair and equitable property taxes depend on an accurate assessment of each property's market value.

1.3 About the Voss database

The Minnesota Department of Revenue collected the data used to prepare this report and compiled it in the property tax-income database called the "Voss database."

For each homestead in the state, the Voss database contains data on estimated market value, state-paid property tax refunds, net property tax, and homeowner income. This information is used to calculate:

- The effective tax rate (property tax as a percent of market value)
- The ratio of estimated market value to homeowners' income (a measure of housing consumption)
- The property tax burden as a percent of homeowners' income

The report contains tables that show how these measures vary across the state. For example, table 1.7 shows that the median-valued homestead in 2013 was $141,200 in the Southeast region of the state and $189,700 in Dakota County. Table 3.6 shows that 4.2% of homesteaders in the Arrowhead region had income in 2012 of more than $180,000 while 12.0% of Minneapolis homesteads had income of more than $180,000. The report also shows how burdens vary by income level. Table 4.1 shows that the median property tax burden for homeowners in Greater Minnesota with incomes between $10,000 and $30,000 was 2.7% of income while the median burden for those with income of $90,000 or more was 1.6% of income.

These measures allow a basic comparison of property taxation and income, but they alone do not address the question, "What is the correct level of taxation?"

1.4 Data Compilation Process

As part of an overall tax compliance program, the 1986 Minnesota Legislature passed M.S. 273.124, subd. 13, requiring homeowners applying for homestead status on their property to file a homestead application with their county assessor. Homestead status is considered a tax compliance issue because homesteads benefit from reduced class rates, in addition to being eligible for certain tax credits and refunds. The format and content of homestead applications vary slightly among counties, but all must include the names and Social Security numbers of all owner occupants of a property receiving homestead status.

Each county must compile this homestead data in one file and submit it to the Department of Revenue. At the department's request, counties also include (i) the parcel identification number, (ii) the estimated market value, (iii) tax amount, (iv) location indicators, and (v) the homestead property type (i.e. residential, farm, or manufactured home).

The department compiles this data from all counties into a single dataset. The county lists of property owners' Social Security numbers are checked for duplicates or improper claims of homestead. The department then supplies a list to assessors in counties where the possibly improper claims were made. The county assessors investigate each property on the list to determine if the homestead classification was improperly claimed.

The requirement (in 1986) to report Social Security numbers provided the groundwork for linking property tax and income data. In 1987, the Legislature passed a law to mandate tracking of this linked data.

1.5 Excluded Records

The database used for this report does not include all homesteads in the state:

- This report's analysis is limited to each homestead's base parcel. The value and tax associated with other chained parcels (e.g. side lots) is excluded.
- Agricultural and manufactured homesteads are outside the scope of this report.
- Relative homesteads, which are occupied by a qualifying relative of the property's owner, were also excluded from the study. The main reason is that a relative homestead's actual property tax burden is unknown and may not be highly correlated to true financial distress.

1.6 Definitions and Main Data Elements

The variables in this report are briefly defined below:

- Estimated Market Value The county assessor's full estimated market value of the homestead portion of each parcel (as of Jan. 2, 2012).
- Homestead Market Value Exclusion Excludes a portion of estimated market value from taxable market value. The exclusion replaced the Homestead Market Value Credit beginning with taxes payable in 2012. The amount of the exclusion (from $0-$30,400 per homestead) is based solely on market value. More than 95% of homesteads received a reduction in taxable value via this exclusion in 2013. [Note: The actual impact the exclusion has on a homestead's tax depends on the local tax rate and the mix of property within each jurisdiction. Due to the complexity of this impact, a regional comparison of the net benefit of the exclusion lies outside the scope of this report.]

- Property Tax Refund The sum of the regular property tax refund and the targeted, or special, refund. The "No Refund" range represents instances where no refund was received. Statewide, more than 25% of residential homesteads received a property tax refund in 2013.
- Net Tax The net property tax after credits and refunds. The value is calculated by subtracting the regular and targeted refund amounts from the property tax refund qualifying amount reported by the county. The qualifying tax amount is used for calculating refunds and may differ from the actual property tax due on a parcel.
- Effective Tax Rate The net property tax divided by the estimated market value, expressed as a percentage. In cases where a homestead's base parcel includes both residential and other uses only the market value of the residential portion is included in the analysis.
- Homestead Income The income of homesteaders. As with the PTR Income definition, both taxable and non-taxable income are counted. This includes nontaxable Social Security and pension income, interest income, workers' compensation, public assistance, etc. About 3% of homestead records were excluded because they lacked any income information.
- EMV / Income Ratio The ratio of the assessed value of the homestead to the income of the homesteader(s).
- Property Tax Burden The Net Tax divided by Homestead Income.

4 Property Tax Burden as a Percent of Income

The following tables present some detail on the relationship between two variables, income and property tax burden. Sections 4.1 and 4.2 present the median property tax burdens for various income ranges by region in Greater Minnesota and the Metro, respectively. The income ranges used in the Metro Area regions and the Greater Minnesota regions vary slightly. Metro Area regions have one income range for "$10,000 to $45,000," while Greater Minnesota regions have separate ranges for "$10,000 to $30,000" and "$30,000 to $45,000." Similarly, the Greater Minnesota regions have one income range for "More than $90,000," while Metro Area regions have separate ranges for "$90,000 to $125,000" and "More than $125,000." The income distribution of homesteads in Metro Area regions is quite different from the distribution in Greater Minnesota regions. The differing income ranges help maintain taxpayer income anonymity at the extreme upper and lower income ranges while still providing direct regional comparisons for most homesteads – those with incomes between $45,000 and $90,000.

Sections 4.3 and 4.4 show the number and percentage of homesteads having property taxes that exceed 5% of their total homestead income. As with the medians table in Section 1.7, these counts are reported both before and after the application of the property tax refund. This offers some sense of the importance of the program in reducing property tax burdens in various regions and at various levels of income.

Only total counts are shown for homesteads in the "$10,000 or less" income range due to the overstatement of property tax burden. The lowest range includes homesteads that had temporarily low incomes or better overall economic well-being than was indicated by their money income of 2012. A portion of retirees, for example, may have been living primarily on savings or other assets but reported small amounts of annual money income received. Due to unemployment or business fluctuations, some homesteads that would have normally had higher incomes are also included in the "$10,000 or less" income range. A small portion of homesteads were in this income range only because they reported business losses or large capital losses for income tax purposes in 2012.
