Bonding Bill Comparisons

Understanding the Local Impacts of Public Works Legislation Being Considered by the Minnesota Legislature

May 5, 2017

On January 4th, Governor Mark Dayton released his public works or “bonding” proposal. Governor Dayton’s Jobs Bill would build more than 240 urgently-needed infrastructure projects in communities across Minnesota, creating an estimated 22,950 jobs. Two weeks later, the Senate Republican Majority released their proposed bonding bill, and has successfully passed their proposal through an open and transparent committee process. In the final weeks of the legislative session, the House Republican Majority released their bonding proposal. It would provide $220 million for road and bridge projects, leaving just $380 million for other infrastructure projects across Minnesota. In 2016, Minnesota communities submitted project requests totaling $3.7 billion in need across the state.

The following charts (by county) provide a comparison of the bonding bills being considered this year at the Minnesota State Capitol. We hope that these comparisons (included below) provide you and your readers a better understanding of what is at stake for your communities this session when it comes to a public works bill. I have also included a chart below with a few key numbers to keep in mind for context around the need for a bonding bill this session.

NOTE: There are a number of earmarked transportation projects included in the bonding proposals offered by the Legislature. Governor Dayton’s proposal does not include many of those earmarks, because he believes transportation projects should be funded with a comprehensive, long-term transportation strategy with dedicated revenues. Filling the bonding bill with transportation projects crowds out other essential infrastructure projects that can only be funded through bonding. Therefore, the Governor has proposed a comprehensive transportation solution for roads, bridges, and transit.
