RESIDENTIAL BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED IN 1988
FOR THE TWIN CITIES METROPOLITAN AREA

About This Report

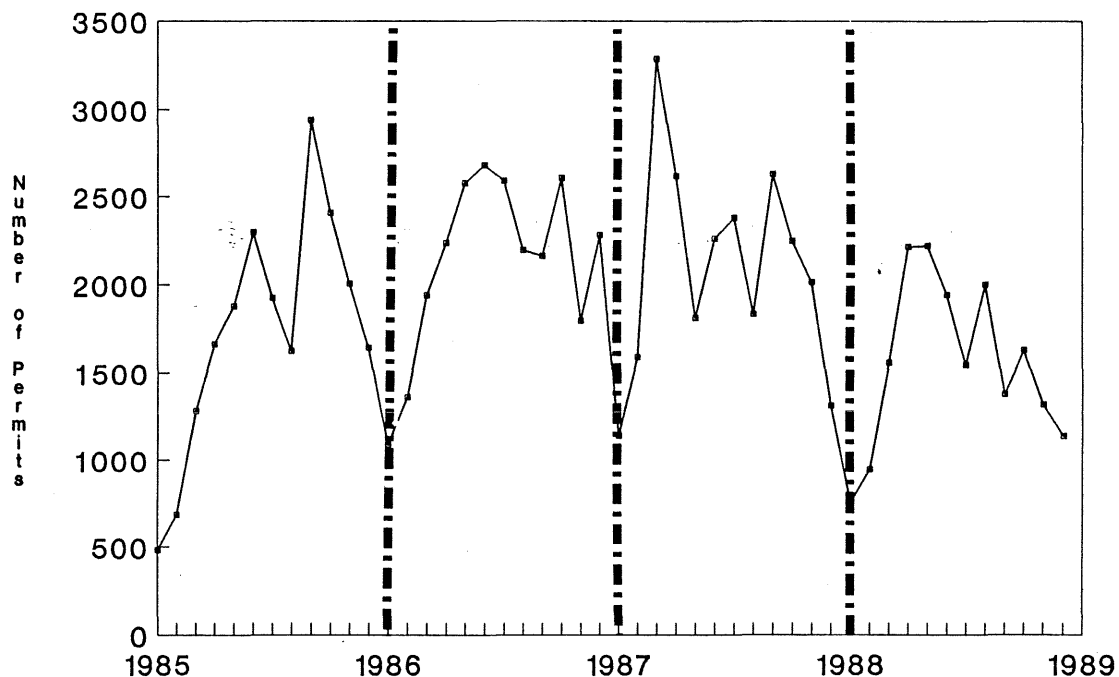

This report contains data about the construction activity of single and multi-family residences during 1988 in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. In particular, it presents data on the number of building permits issued and their permit valuations during that year. Original data, collected from local governments by the U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, was used for this report. It describes where growth occurred within the region and provides information on changes from previous years for the two major topics; numbers of permits and valuations. Included at the end of the report is a section on "definitions" which explains the format of the city-level data that was used.

Summary

Housing construction turned down in 1988 from highs reported in 1986 and 1987. The total of 18,850 units was 25 percent below 1987, but was still the third best year since 1975. Single family permits, at 12,413 declined 19 percent. Multi-family declined 37.5 percent, ending the year with 6,437 units. The 1988 multi-family units were 62.5 percent of the 10,299 units issued in 1987. Total valuations for single-family units in the Metropolitan Area were off 11.7 percent from 1987 at $1.28 million, while multi-family valuations plummeted to 99 percent of the 1987 total, to $264.05 million. Figure 1 shows the monthly issuance of permits from January 1986 to December 1988.

Residential Construction by Type

In 1988, 12,413 single family units accounted for 65.9 percent of the total permits issued; 2,385 fewer than in 1987. Multi-family units made up the remaining 34.1 percent. Ninety-two percent of all multi-family units were in buildings of five-plus units. The remaining eight percent were buildings of two-, three-, or four-units. The Commerce Department routinely tabulates town-houses in single family and condominiums in the multi-family category.* Condominium construction peaked in 1983 when it represented nearly 50 percent of the multi-family permits issued in that year. This type of unit has subsequently declined to less than 15 percent of the 1985 and 1986 multi-family totals.

Residential alterations and addition projects for which building permits were taken out were valued at $232,339,864 and includes the category 'garages and carports.' Alterations and additions represent only 12.6 percent of all housing construction in the region during 1988.

Table 1 has historical data for total, single family and multi-family residential permits from 1975 to 1988.

* The Metropolitan Council independently solicits building permit information from local units of government on an annual basis. This data is more accurate and contains greater detail on types of housing construction. Housing unit totals for the Region are usually quite close to the Commerce Department's data, with somewhat greater differences between single family/multi-family totals. The Council data for 1987 indicated slightly more single family and town house units and fewer multi-family units than the Commerce Department showed. Net units of both types was only 115 less than the Census Bureau's.

Quarterly Building Permit Activity

Figure 2 shows the Metropolitan Area housing permit activity for each quarter from 1985 to 1988. The strength of this market peaked between the second quarter of 1986 and the third quarter of 1987. Since that time it has substantially dropped.

Market Conditions

Raising interest rates contributed to the slow down in new single-family permits issued in 1988. Figure 3 on the following page shows the relationship between housing permits issued on a quarterly basis and interest rates from 1978 to the end of 1988.

National Trends

The overall market during 1988 was slower than the previous year. However, there were some hot spots around the country, mainly in the South and West: Florida, Atlanta, Las Vegas, Los Angeles and San Bernadino-Riverside. Closer to home, both Chicago and Milwaukee had higher numbers of permits issued in 1988 than in 1987. Nearly all the New England States saw declines of 10 to 35 percent in total permits issued. The change for the major urban markets in 1988 ranged from an increase of 112 percent for Las Vegas to declines of 35.5 percent for San Antonio and 34.4 percent for Albuquerque. However, many areas experienced an upturn during the fourth quarter of the year for both single- and multi-family units.

Vacancy Rates

Vacancy rates, the ratio of empty housing units to all available housing units, may be used as a proxy measure for overbuilding. The rates are obtained from Northern States Power's (NSP) billing records. Although it is the major electrical utility in the Metropolitan Area and represents the majority of housing units, the data obtained in this way guarantees undercounting this rate.

Regardless, this measure is valuable for examining trends. Data taken from the Council's 1988 Fourth Quarter Housing Vacancy and Turnover Report, provides annual comparison summaries for total rates, single and multi-family rates. That report indicates that vacancy levels in 1988 were higher than all previous years back to 1975. This may be due to strong building in 1986 and 1987, which resulted in some portintial for the Area to become over built.

Permits Issued in Minnesota

Total permits, single- plus multi-family, issued in 1988 for all of Minnesota amounted to 25,604. The seven county Twin Cities Metropolitan Area's total was 73.6 percent of the state, leaving a balance of 6,754 units or 26.4 percent for the non-metro area. The breakout of the non-metro area's single and multi-family units were 4,793 and 1,961 respectively (27.9 and 23.3 percent of the state totals in those categories). Table 2 shows the change in share between 1987 and 1988 for the Metropolitan Area and the remainder of the state.

The table also shows both the percentages within these two areas (totaling 100 percent) and also their relative percentage of state building permits. This allows easy comparison of 1987 with 1988 for each category and the change of share between the two areas over the two years. For example, multi-family permits in the Metropolitan Area during 1987 amounted to 87.6 percent of all multi-family permits issued in the state that year. In 1988, that percent dropped to 76.7 indicating a reduction of multi-family units in the more heavily populated metro area which had higher vacancy rates in multi-family units in 1988, and increased activity in the remainder of the state.

Growth Within the Region

With the exception of Carver County, all Metropolitan Area counties showed this general decrease in residential building in 1988 compared to the previous year.

The change in total permits issued varied from a 12.9 percent gain in Carver County to a 40.0 percent loss (3,311 units) in Hennepin County and a 40.4 percent loss (1,071 units) in Ramsey County. Based on the share of building permits issued in the region during 1988, each county came within a few percentage points of its respective share in 1987. (See Table 4) This held for total permits and single family units, but there were some slight differences for multi-family units. Both Carver and Washington counties reported a doubling of their 1988 share relative to 1987, while Anoka, Dakota, Hennepin and Ramsey all dropped 2.0 to 4.0 percent and Scott was stable. This year, as in the past three, Dakota County's multi-family percentage dropped, which seems to indicate more development of that category of housing unit in other counties. Table 4 shows these percentages and changes from 1987 to 1988 for single-and multi-family units.

Tables 5, 6, 7, and 8 show more specific data for the seven county Metropolitan Area along with the three additional Minnesota counties and one Wisconsin county which make up the 11 county Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA). These tables display quarterly activity for total, single- and multi-family housing permits issued for the year. In general, there were fewer permits issued during 1988 than in 1987 for all months except May (both single and multi-family units) and for single family in November, and multi-family in April. There were significantly fewer multi-family permits issued during the last two quarters relative to the previous year, while the year-to-year differences on a monthly basis for single family permits was quite uniform.

Housing Growth Leaders of 1988

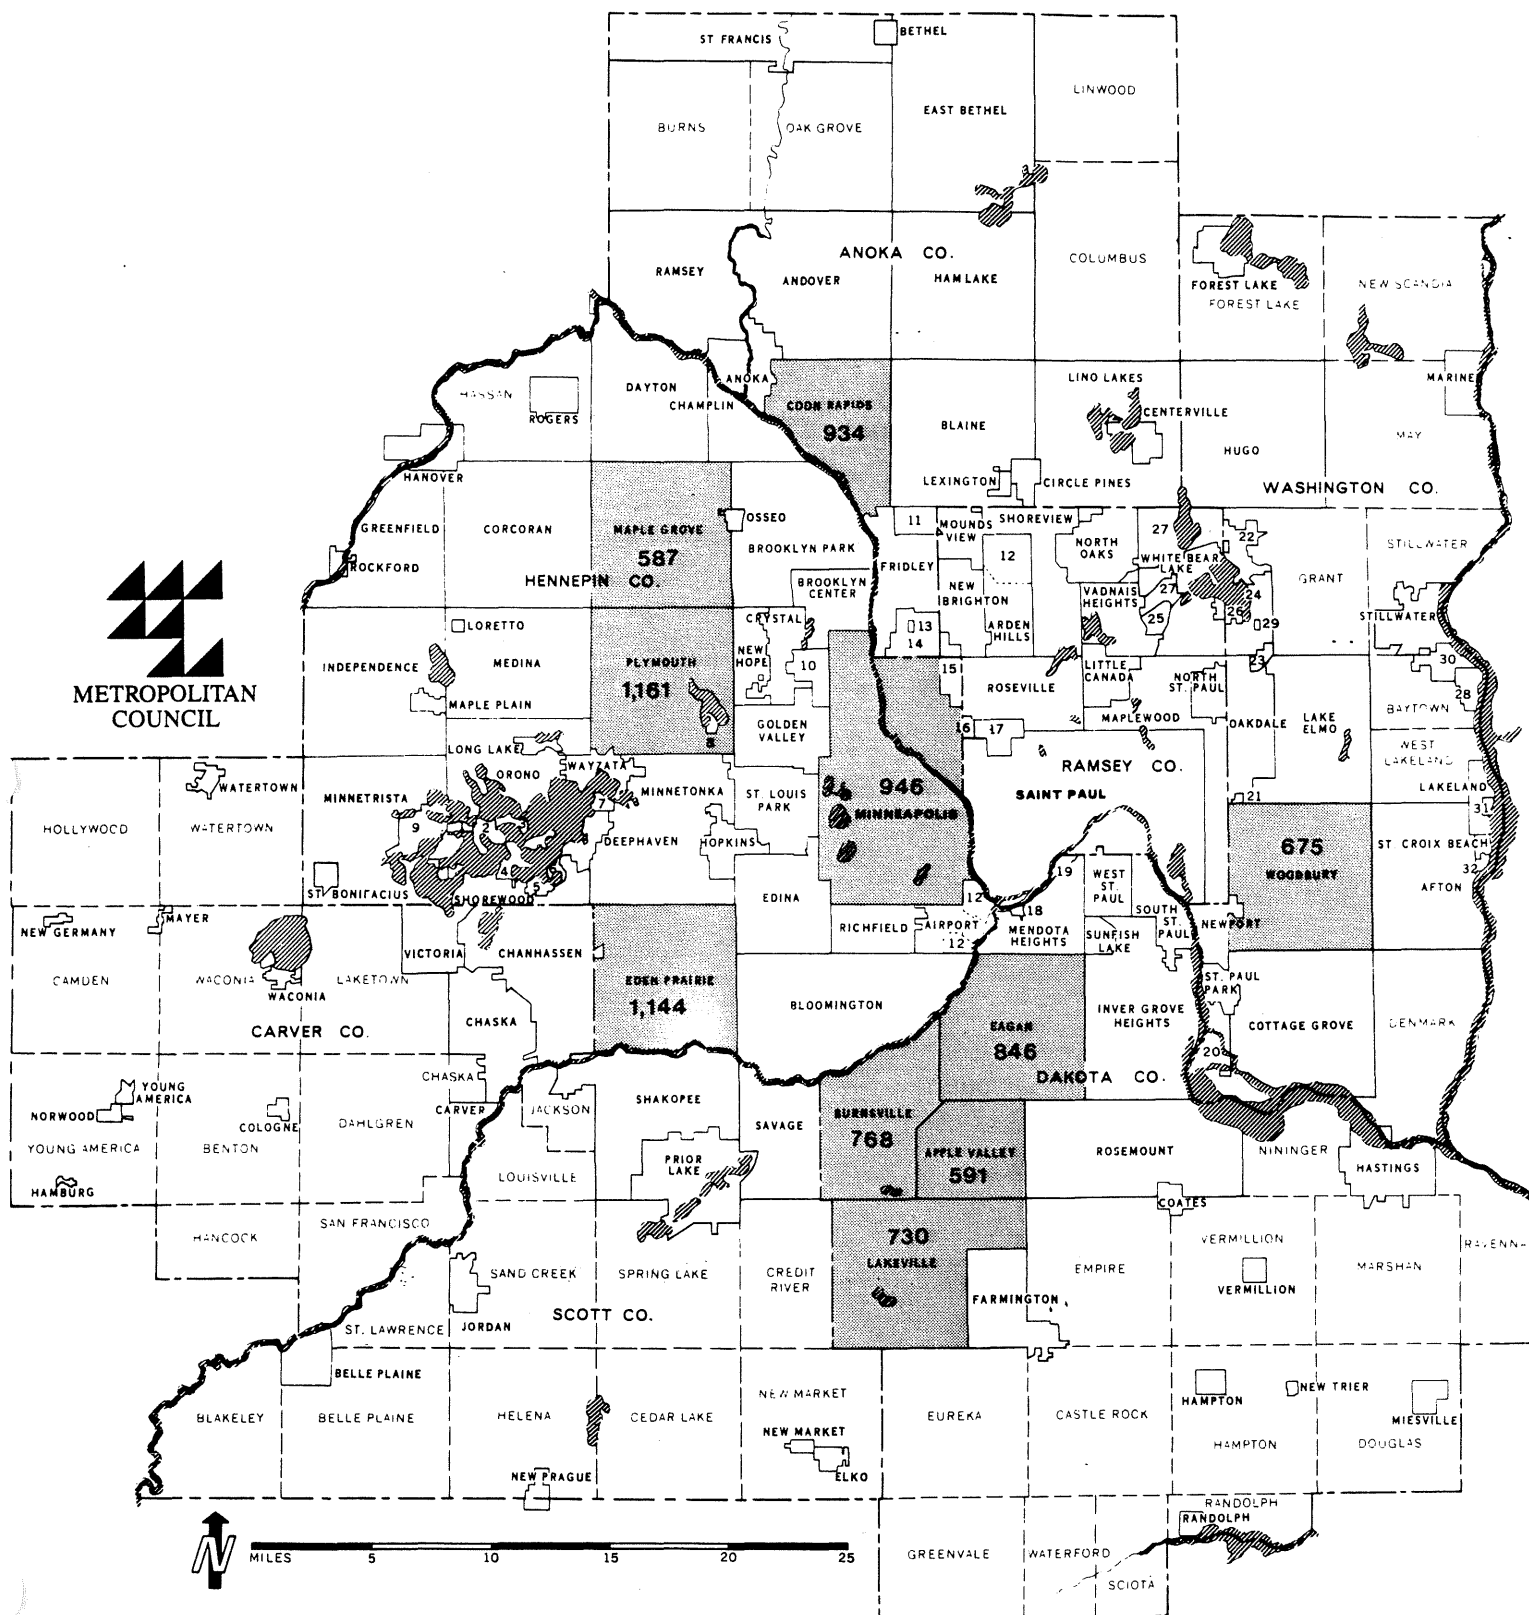

The cities listed in Table 9 attracted 44 percent of the region's total building permits during the year, and accounted for a total of $669,713,888 of the new valuations or 43.4 percent. In 1987, Bloomington, Minnetonka and St. Paul each had a large number of multi-family units, whereas in 1988 all were missing from this list. Due to a large number of multi-family units authorized in Minneapolis in 1988, it once again made the top ten list. Others new in 1988 include Lakeville, Maple Grove and Andover, each with a substantial number of single family units. Two new cities in the multi-family top ten were Chaska and Blaine. Figure 5 on the following page is a map of the region locating these top ten communities.

Table 10 shows the top twenty permit issuing cities during 1988. Also included in the table are the number of permits issued in 1987 and an annual average forecasted household change for these cities. Among the 1988 list are three cities not appearing on the 1987 list: Minneapolis, Chanhassen and Cottage Grove. The cities not making the 1988 list but were included in 1987 include; Bloomington, St. Paul, St. Louis Park and Fridley. The 20 cities reported a total of 12,341 permits during the year, representing 65.5 percent of the total number issued in the seven county region. Individually, for those cities on both 1987 and 1988 lists, there were only nine that reported more permits in 1988. The substantial drop in total permits for 1988 was not equally divided across all cities. For example, Minnetonka reported almost 1,500 less units in 1988 than 1987, while Plymouth reported close to 300 more.

TOP TEN CITIES IN RESIDENTIAL BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED IN 1988

Data in the right most column of Table 10 should be interpreted with caution. It represents a forecasted household growth for each city and is based on two different Council data sets. That column shows the difference between the 1990 household forecasts and the 1985 household estimates, which is then divided by 5. These data are intended to help compare recent growth with the forecasts. They are not goals, nor are they upper or lower limits for growth in areas within the metropolitan service area.

In the Region as a whole, the 1980 to 1990 households were forecasted to increase by 20 percent, and for 1990 to 2000 by 8 percent. Although most of the permits that were issued result in construction of housing, permit totals do not necessarily translate into net housing change due to significant numbers of demolitions and conversions. Finally, some units remain vacant and others, which attract tenants in one area, often create vacancies in the region's housing stock in another location.

Geographic Policy Areas

In its Metropolitan Development and Investment Framework (MDIF), the Council has grouped cities within the Region according to the extent of their present and future development. The MDIF contains definitions of the geographic groupings that are used in policy decisions. Housing permit activity for all policy areas in 1988 is shown in Table 11. These data represent whole communities, rather than reporting two parts of a community that may lay in two different policy areas. Figure 6 shows where communities are located in these geographic policy area.

Most new residential growth until the year 2000 is expected to take place in the developing area, formerly referred to as the area of planned urbanization. In 1988, 70 percent of the building permits were issued in that area, five percentage points higher than in 1987. The percentage of multi-family permits issued in this area increased in 1988 to 65 percent from 52 percent in 1987.

The "fully developed" area includes the two central cities and a ring of contiguous cities around them and makes up the core of the region (See Figure 6). These cities had at least 85 percent of their available land under development by the end of 1984. In 1988, this policy area issued almost 12 percent of the Region's total permits, five percent of the single-family permits and 24.5 percent of the multi-family permits. While the 1988 single-family permits were 154 fewer than in 1987, total 1988 permits were down almost 3,000 and multi-family permits were 2,791 fewer.

The changes between 1987 and 1988 in the three remaining policy areas (free standing growth centers, general rural area and rural town centers) were quite similar for percent of total units and single-family units. However, while the freestanding growth centers increased their share of multi-family permits from 4.2 to 9.7 percent, rural town centers dropped in number from 102 in 1987 to only 8 in 1988.

TWIN CITIES METROPOLITAN AREA

Permit Activity in Counties Adjacent to the Metropolitan Area

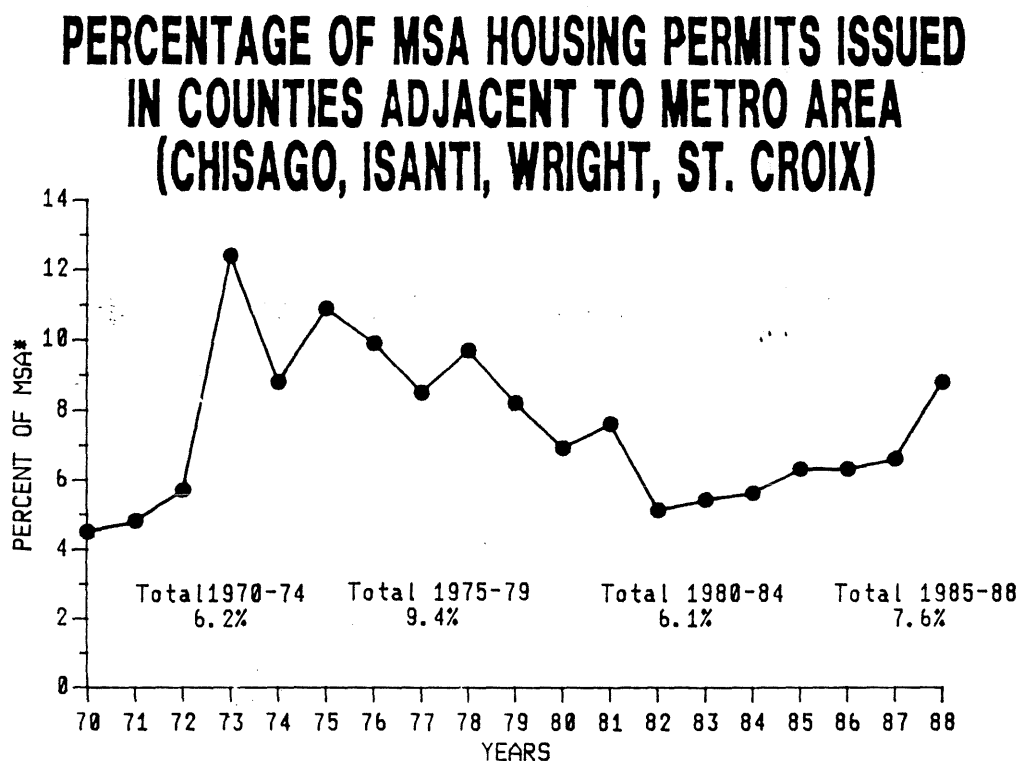

The U.S. Census Bureau's definition of the Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) includes four counties adjacent to the east, north and west boundaries of the seven county Metropolitan Area. They are Chisago, Isanti and Wright in Minnesota, and St. Croix in Wisconsin. Monitoring the residential building within these counties helps understand the regional impact of certain Council policy decisions, even though they are outside the authority of the Metropolitan Council. During the 1970's the percent of residential permits issued in these counties as a share of the 11-county metro MSA was as high as 12 percent, but due to the recent heavy growth within the seven county area, that share has dropped to the six-to-eight percent range. Table 12 shows the number of permits issued from 1985 to 1988 for these four counties and their share of the total permits issued for all 11 counties. Figure 7 is included to provide a look at this trend from 1970 to 1988.

Average Permit Valuation

Average single family permit valuation continued to rise in 1988, up 5.2 percent over 1987, to $103,088. Multi-family average valuation per unit dropped a significant 19.6 percent from 1987; a reduction from $51,047 to $41,020 in 1988. Three contributing factors may be offered to help explain some of this decrease. First, there was an abnormally high number of high valuation multi-family units issued in one city during 1987: 1,469 units which had an average valuation of over $78,900. Second, in 1988, the average valuation for the multi-family units in Anoka County were about $10,000 less than for the remaining six metro counties. Finally, in 1988 there were no large, high-valued complexes build in the Metropolitan Area as there were in 1987. Figure 8 shows the historical trend in average permit valuation per housing unit from 1980 to 1988.

Definitions

A residential unit is defined as a house or apartment unit intended for occupancy as separate living quarters, having either a kitchen or cooking facilities for the exclusive use of the occupant and direct access from the outside or through a common hall. Residential units do not include group quarters such as dormitories and barracks, hotels and motels.

The Minneapolis-St. Paul MSA (Metropolitan Statistical Area) includes the counties of Anoka, Carver, Chisago, Dakota, Hennepin, Isanti, Ramsey, Scott, Washington and Wright in Minnesota and St. Croix in Wisconsin. The Metropolitan Area includes the seven counties of Anoka, Carver, Dakota, Hennepin, Ramsey Scott and Washington. The totals in this data set are not necessarily the total number of permits issued in the area, as some communities (cities, townships, and some counties) do not return report forms to the Census Bureau.

Valuation data are the value of all of the permits for that type of residential unit. Valuation is not consistant among communities but in general, excludes cost of land, fees and assessments, profit, and cost of various extras such as appliances and carpeting.

Tables 13 and 14 summarizes the 1988 data for each county in the MSA and provide comparisons with 1987. City-level/township-level data follows on the printout from the Censs Bureau. Data for the current month (December) and for the year-to-date both appear on the same page.

The "ITEM" column on the printout indicates the type of building permit that was issued. Although some item codes differ from some previous reports, their definitions are the same. For residential construction, these are:

- 101 - single-family buildings, including townhouses;
- 103 - buildings with two units;
- 104 - buildings with three or four units;
- 105 - buildings with five or more units;
- 109 - total of codes 101, 103, 104 and 105.

The number and valuation of units in each catagory are listed under the "UNITS" and "COST" columns, respectively. For each county, information is reported by community, followed by the county total. For communities that did not send permit reports to the Commerce Department, permit activity is estimated, using past reports for those areas and current data for similar areas. In the city data, items that were estimated are flagged with asterisks. Year-to-date data are presented for reported only and for reported plus estimated (imputed). The county totals are given for both, for the current month and for the year-to-date. In 1988, this estimating process added 386 additional units to the Metropolitan Area total than was reported, which was two percent of the total.

The Commerce Department also collects information on other kinds of building permits and on demolitions, using the following codes.

New Nonhousekeeping Residential Buildings

- 213 Hotels, motels, and tourist chains intended for transient accommodations.
- 214 Other shelter

Nonresidential

- 318 Amusement and recreational buildings
- 319 Churches and other religious buildings
