Introduction

The Minnesota State Archives

The Minnesota State Archives has been administered since 1971 by the Minnesota Historical Society and since 1975 as part of the society's Division of Archives and Manuscripts, headed by the state archivist.* The division's staff members collect, preserve, organize, and make available for research personal papers and records of organizations, as well as the records of state and local government that constitute the State Archives. Published guides to the manuscripts collections are listed on page 93.

The State Archives holdings measure about 18,000 cubic feet, with new accessions being added at the rate of about 1,500 feet per year. They include records of every governor and of other elected officials (state auditor, attorney general, secretary of state); records of the legislature and its committees; records of many of the state's departments, agencies, boards, and commissions; records of the U.S. district land offices; records of Minnesota Territory; census records; and records of counties, townships, municipalities, and school districts.

The Preliminary Checklist

This checklist is the first consolidated, publicly available listing of Minnesota's State Archives holdings. It was

*Two articles by Robert M. Brown, Minnesota's state archivist from 1950 to 1965, sketch the earlier history of the Minnesota State Archives: "The Development of an Archival Program in Minnesota," American Archivist 16(January 1953):39-44; and "Minnesota - The State Archives and Records Service Reconsidered," American Archivist 26(July 1963):355-360.

compiled from summary forms prepared as the Archives was moved to a new location during 1976 and 1977. In preparation for this move, volumes were boxed, other records were repacked into standard record storage boxes, and box contents lists were made based on existing lists and box labels or on cursory examination of the records. These box contents lists were then arranged, edited, and typed on series summary forms which are filed in loose-leaf notebooks. There are about two thousand such forms; some list only a volume or two, others many cubic feet.

During compilation of the checklist, many summary forms were revised when related records were found listed in several places or when other irregularities were discovered and corrected. Solution of the remaining problems will require further arrangement and description of the records and preparation of administrative histories.

Arrangement. The checklist is divided into three major sections: Territorial Records, State Records, and Local Records. The section on state records also includes some federal records now held by the state. Within each section, entries for the record groups are arranged alphabetically, reflecting the arrangement of the loose-leaf series summary forms from which the checklist was compiled; in fact, the checklist might best be described as a "table of contents."

Record group titles--representing the state's present and former departments, agencies, boards, commissions, and constitutional offices--are alphabetized by keyword: thus, the State Board of Examiners of Nurses is listed as NURSES' EXAMINERS, BOARD OF, and the State Auditor as AUDITOR. In several cases, cross-references have been made from alternate titles. See also references have been made to point out related records listed in more than one place, or related agencies not brought together by keyword listing.

Subgroup designations (in italics, indented) generally represent administrative divisions within the record group, although some reflect functions, subject matter, or record type. Present subgroup titles are often tentative, and they will probably be modified as the records are evaluated and reorganized.

The record series in each group or subgroup are also listed alphabetically by series title, indented beneath the subgroup and/or record group title. These, too, will be modified and standardized as the records are processed.

The term "records" (with or without the modifier "miscellaneous") has often been used as a series title. This designates 1) several series for which specific quantities are not known; 2) groups of records that contain many fragmented series; 3) groups of miscellaneous or unarranged records for which no better title could be devised. It is nearly always followed by a scope or content note.

Quantities generally have been expressed in numbers of items, folders, volumes, or boxes--standard record storage boxes holding approximately 1 cubic foot. An "oversize" box holds about 1.5 cubic feet; the nonstandard boxes referred to are usually about half the size of standard boxes.

Restrictions. Access to some of the records listed in the checklist has been restricted, generally because of statutory regulations regarding the privacy or confidentiality of the information contained therein. Future legislation may affect the status of still other records, not presently noted as being restricted.

Territorial Records

Minnesota Territory was established in 1849; its first officers were appointed by President Zachary Taylor. The territory then encompassed not only the present state boundaries, but also sparsely populated parts of present-day North and South Dakota as far west as the Missouri and White Earth rivers. Minnesota was admitted to the Union as a state in 1858. The relatively small quantity of territorial records is fairly well arranged and described,

State Records

The State Archives holds records of the state of Minnesota dating from 1858 to 1978. Not all of the present holdings may be considered permanent, however. Some record groups listed here may be extensively weeded as the records are processed. Also, the tentative series and subgroup titles are regularly being revised as new accessions are added and older records are organized.

This section includes federal records now part of the State Archives, listed here under the headings U.S. GENERAL LAND OFFICE, U.S. SURVEYOR GENERAL, U.S. SELECTIVE SERVICE, and CENSUS RECORDS (an artificial record group created to simplify internal reference service).

The following records have been excluded from the checklist: approximately 9 cubic feet of miscellaneous maps and plats, and approximately 100 cubic feet of state agency publications (now filed separately) that will eventually be integrated with records of the originating agencies. Originals of the state constitution are displayed in the State Capitol.

ADJUTANT GENERAL

The records in this group are not well organized, the series are broken and mixed, and the dates and quantities are often approximate. Records relating to the Minnesota National Guard, Home Guard, and Naval Militia are mostly unarranged or intermingled with other records. Some National Guard payrolls are listed under AUDITOR, Fiscal Department.

Allotment Rolls (Regiments 1, 4, 5, 8, 10), 1861-1863. 2 oversize folders.

Allotment Rolls, 1863-1869. 1 box.

Civil War allotment rolls also listed under TREASURER.

GOVERNOR

There are more than 1,200 cubic feet of records of Minnesota's governors in the State Archives. Every governor from 1858 to 1978 is represented. In addition, personal papers of many governors, often complementing the official records in the archives, may be found among the manuscripts collections of the Division of Archives and Manuscripts.

The main files (over 900 cubic feet) containing correspondence, reports, memoranda, clippings, and some miscellaneous papers are listed below in six chronological groups, each reflecting a similar kind or level of arrangement.

In addition to the main files, there are also approximately 275 cubic feet of general and miscellaneous records, including letterpress books, proclamations, executive orders, official reports and communications, appointment records, extradition records, and financial records.

45 boxes. In sequentially numbered file folders (#1-641), but

Local Records

The State Archives holdings presently consist of a small number of record series from county offices, school districts, townships, villages, and cities. These local records are listed under the appropriate county, except those of Minneapolis and St. Paul, which are listed separately at the end of the alphabetical county list. Under each county heading, general or miscellaneous county records are listed first, followed by records of specific county offices, records of cities, villages, and townships, and, finally, records of school districts. This section includes records of a few district and municipal courts, and of several justices of the peace.

The future placement of such records is somewhat uncertain. The Minnesota Historical Society cooperates with Minnesota's state universities in administering regional research centers which accept transfers of public records as well as private manuscripts (published guides are described on page 93). Because of space and processing limitations in the regional research centers, however, the State Archives continues to receive local records from all areas of the state. Expansion of the centers' facilities, development of other public records repositories in the state, or expansion or change at the St. Paul facility may mean that local records will be moved. Before planning to use the records, researchers are urged to call or write the State Archives (see page 3).
