The list of activities above clearly shows that intake activities are down from last year. During Program Year 1987 (The twelve month period ending June 30, 1988), approximately 8,200 fewer people registered new or new partial applications than the year before. The change in new applications from last year is shown in Figure 1, page 4. The impact on active job seekers is graphically illustrated in Figure 2. The supply of active job applicants was between 10,000 to 30,000 persons fewer per month during the current program year than the previous year. The sudden change in December 1986 seems to be caused by system programming modifications made at that time. The increase is not explained by increased new or renewal applications, or by a sudden decline of inactivations.

The drop in the applicant supply is caused by several factors. First, employment is high in Minnesota. Improved economic conditions have resulted in fewer unemployed persons looking for work and also fewer unemployment insurance claimants registering for benefits. Unemployment Insurance claimants not expected to be recalled must apply with the Job Service when they file for UI benefits. In Program Year 1987 the number of new applications who were UI claimants fell 18.3 percent statewide from the prior year. This change was the greatest in the Central (-33.3%) and Northwest (-27.9%) districts. Another change in the labor market has been the growth of temporary help agencies. These companies have taken many of the skilled clerical and others who would normally apply with Job Service. This is now happening statewide and is not confined to the Twin Cities metropolitan area. The fact that they are becoming more common shows that employers do use their service. For a variety of reasons, employers prefer to use a temporary service rather than hire an employee.

The numbers of youth are declining as a source of low wage help. The population is steadily aging, with fewer young people to fill entry level jobs. This affects the number of new applications because many of the youth registered with the Job Service in the past. Also, with fewer youth available, companies which have relied on youth for their labor needs, such as restaurants and retail trade, are desperate for workers and are offering incentives. Youth do not need Job Service to aid them in finding employment when jobs are easy to find.

Job Service is not as great a factor in agricultural placement as in the past. The large agricultural firms used to hire many youth on a short-time basis for jobs such as corn detasseling. Area offices supplied the labor for these jobs by holding mass recruitments in the high schools. The large firms now are gradually mechanizing operations which are not as labor intensive. Thus, Job Service has cut back on the mass recruiting.

Management decisions have caused the closing or consolidation of several locations. Several of the outstate AVTI offices have been closed. Group intake is now common and job seekers entering an office may be told to return on another day for registration. The largest decline from a single office closing was in St. Paul, where the downtown office was combined with the Midway office. The levels of activity at the consolidated Midway location do not compare to the combined figures for St. Paul (downtown) and Midway before the merger.

Because of the reduced number of active job applicants, a decrease in related services is to be expected. With fewer applicants, counseling, training, and testing also declined.

Job openings received increased from last year. However, the increase was all in nonagricultural jobs. Agricultural openings received declined by one percent. Nonagricultural job openings received increased in all major industry divisions except mining. Services rose the most, increasing by approximately 6,800 openings over the previous year. The largest increase in services was from business services, which had a gain of 3,900 openings. Manufacturing had the second largest increase, followed by retail trade, where miscellaneous retail gained the most.

By occupation, sales had the largest increase in job openings received. With an increase of over 4,000. Second was service occupations with +3,400 and then benchwork. Material handling and domestic work declined. Combining the number of job openings received in Program Year 1987 with the job openings remaining unfilled at the end of the prior year, there were 181,142 agricultural and nonagricultural job openings available for filling in Program Year 1987, an increase of 15.1 percent over the previous year.

Despite the increase in job openings available, both agricultural and nonagricultural placements declined from the prior program year. For nonagricultural placements, much of the State showed an annual increase. The Central District had an increase of 9.0 percent. The Northwest District rose by 5.1 percent. The Northeast District, which has had much lower activity than other areas, increased by 38.2 percent. The South District decreased by 5.2 percent, mainly in the Rochester area. However, the outstate gains were counteracted by declines in the Twin Cities, mostly from the East Metro District. The overall Metro Area decrease was 15.7 percent. The West Metro District dropped 4.6 percent, while the East Metro District went down 25.3 percent. A review of jobs orders indicate that many of the listed openings in the metropolitan areas are with firms expanding to the suburbs. These firms are hiring many part-time sales clerks, cashiers, cooks, busboys, and service desk employees. The area offices have not had enough job applicants for this kind of work. Many applicants are seeking higher wages and positions requiring higher skills than offered by the aforementioned jobs.

Monthly comparisons of placements between Program Year 1987 and Program Year 1986 show that the decline in nonagricultural placements occurred in the first two months of the program year. See Figure 6 on page 6. Allied with late reporting of 225 summer youth placements in September of 1986, instead of June, and Program Year 1987 appears worse than Program Year 1986. The months October through June give a truer picture of how the current program year has fared statewide.

The agricultural placement total is down by 1,500 from last program year. It is difficult to draw an overall picture of this growing season since activity does not reach its peak by the end of June, but the summer of 1987 was a dry year, and the current growing season has been even more hot and dry. This has had some impact since many farmers have been in financial trouble and foreclosures have risen. Jobs employing migrant workers have been unaffected through June of 1988. The bulk of the migrant workers had not arrived yet. Those who came for field preparation and planting have found work. This work was completed before the hot, dry weather took effect.

The number of applicants obtaining employment on their own within 90 days of receiving assistance, other than job referrals, from the Job Service rose dramatically in Program Year 1987. The increase is not due to intensive work this year, but lax reporting during Program Year 1986. In the fall of 1986, Job Service noted declining counts of this activity and issued a memo to the area offices stating the importance of inputting obtained employment transactions into computer files for count purposes. Monthly counts immediately rose. The increase seen in this year's final total is the result.

Included in this program year summary are tables for the Work Incentive Program (WIN). The data for PY 87 shows large declines from the previous year. WIN was scheduled to end with June 1987. All active participants were deregistered and activities had ended when additional funding was authorized. First the extension was through September 1987, then more funding extended WIN through Program Year 1987, but at a much reduced level. Unless there is further funding, WIN will end during Program Year 1988.

On pages 9 - 11 is a table of Minnesota non-agricultural employers who place one or more job orders with Job Service. The table provides a gauge of how many employers used job service for their employment needs. This is the first year this count was generated by computerized records. This is the first such report of this depth.

There have been several changes in area office locations during the past twelve months. The downtown St. Paul office merged with the St. Paul Midway office and all activities were transferred to the Midway location. The Minneapolis General Assistance activities were added to the Minneapolis downtown totals. New offices were opened as Faribault AVTI, Mpls. Technical Institute Special Program, and Owatonna. WIN opened offices in Bloomington, Crystal, and Minnetonka.

The St. Paul Guidance and Training Center is now published separately. Litchfield is again reported as a location instead of being included in the Willmar data.

Thief River Falls and Roseau have been placed under the control of Crookston. The White Bear Lake office has been moved to North St. Paul and the South St. Paul office has moved to West St. Paul.
