INTRODUCTION

The Minnesota Employment and Wages by Economic Region and County is published quarterly by the Research and Statistics Office of the Minnesota Department of Jobs and Training. The data contained in this publication includes two digits of industry detail wherever possible. To avoid violating data privacy laws and to maintain the mandated confidentiality of individual firm data it was necessary to combine industries wherever there are too few firms in an industry cell. For this reason, some counties show less industry detail than others.

The source of the information is data developed and analyzed by the Research and Statistics Office of the Minnesota Department of Jobs and Training. The data is selected from quarterly tax reports submitted by employers covered under the Minnesota unemployment compensation tax law. All individual employer data is confidential. The data selected is reviewed for accuracy and organized in accordance with the U.S. 1987 Standard Industrial Classification Manual. Approximately 97 percent of the total nonagricultural wage and salary employment in Minnesota is included. There are nine categories of workers excluded from coverage under Minnesota State law:

- 1) the self-employed;
- 2) farms with less than four employees in 20 weeks;
- 3) all railroad transportation employment;
- 4) insurance and real estate salespeople who work only on commission basis;
- 5) students working for the school while a full-time student;
- 6) those employed by a church or synagogue for religious work;
- 7) minor children, spouse and parents working for owner of a business;
- 8) elected officials at the Federal, State and Local levels of government;
- 9) the Red Lake Chippewa Tribe.

TERMS

This section defines a number of key terms necessary to use this data.

The term units refers to the number of plant locations or work sites within the industry and county. For example, there are seven units of the U.S. Post Office in Morrison County.

Monthly employment is reported by job site, not residence of the employees and represents a count of workers on employer payrolls for the week including the 12th of the month.

Average employment is calculated by summing the three monthly figures and dividing by 3. Sub-totals do not necessarily add to totals because of rounding.

Total wages represent wages paid during the entire quarter.

The average weekly wage is calculated by dividing total wages paid by average employment and then dividing again by 13. Average weekly wage figures should be used with caution. Some industries have more temporary or part-time workers than others and this has the affect of lowering the average weekly wage. Also, average weekly wages in some industries may be high because of bonuses paid at the end of a year, or because lower-paid seasonal workers were laid off.

Unallocated employment is listed on page 31. It represents employment of traveling salespeople who have no attachment to a specific work site or those few employers who are not able to report multiple business locations separately.

Minnesota Covered Employment for the Calendar Year 1989

Covered employment in Minnesota rose 2.9 percent between 1988 and 1989 adding just under 58,000 new jobs for an annual average total of 2,019,916. Wages increased 3.9 percent in 1989, giving an unofficial average weekly wage of $429, compared to $413 in 1988. These figures, however, show a slower rate of growth in the economy than the increase between 1987 and 1988 when employment grew 3.3 percent and the average weekly wage exhibited a 5.1 percent increase.

Of the major industries, Services showed the greatest employment increase with 29,390 new jobs, a 6.4 percent increase for an annual average total of 491,945. Within the Services industry, the most significant increases occurred in health services with 7,326 new jobs, business services with 6,989 jobs, social services (such as job training and day care) with 3,482 jobs, and engineering and management with 2,929 jobs. The rest of the increase was spread throughout the industry as every sector of Services grew in 1989. The growth in the Services industry has been so strong in the past few years that within two years it could replace Trade as the industry with the greatest employment.

Trade employment increased this year by only 10,025 jobs, or 2 percent, compared with an increase of 3.2 percent or almost 16,000 jobs in 1988. Last year every division of Trade except home furnishings grew, and the decline in home furnishings was the result of an industrial classification change that moved video stores from the retail home furnishing classification to motion pictures. This year the employment increases were smaller in every industry except miscellaneous retail stores such as drug stores, bookstores and florists, which grew faster than the previous year. Most notably, restaurant employment grew by only 1,319 in 1989 in comparison to 3,993 a year ago and 4,949 the year before that. Restaurant employment in the Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan Area actually lost about 170 jobs, while in Greater Minnesota employment grew more rapidly in this industry than in the previous year.

Construction employment rose by just under 1,000 jobs in 1989, and the increase was primarily in the special trades which rose about 1,300. Heavy construction, also known as road and bridge work, rose a little over 100 jobs. These increases more than offset a loss of about 450 jobs in general contracting which includes both residential and commercial construction.

Employment in Manufacturing rose by about 5,600 jobs in Minnesota in 1989, but it pales in comparison to the 17,520 job increase in 1988. This marked slowdown in growth took place almost entirely in the durable goods sector while non-durables equalled the growth of a year earlier. The most noticeable problems in 1989 appeared in the industrial and commercial machinery industry which includes computer equipment manufacturing. Sizeable employment reductions of about 3,500 in the computer segment of the industry took place in the Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan Area as the shake out in mainframe computers re-appeared. Transportation equipment was the only industry in durables to report a significant employment gain (1,318) in 1989. Other durable goods industries reporting increases were lumber and wood products, instruments and related products, and fabricated metals, but they were small compared to the year before.

Among the non-durable goods industries, printing and publishing and food processing accounted for 78 percent of the 5,022 increase in employment over-the-year. All other non-durable goods industries except chemicals posted small employment additions from year ago levels.

In 1989 the experiences of the Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan Area and Greater Minnesota were quite different. In the Metropolitan Area growth in Manufacturing was virtually flat. An increase of 2,408 jobs in non-durable goods, mostly from printing and publishing, helped offset a loss of 2,078 jobs in durable goods, stemming from cutbacks in industrial machinery and equipment. This enabled the Metropolitan Area to post a small gain of 330 manufacturing jobs and an annual average total of 254,513.

Greater Minnesota, however, grew by about 5,300 manufacturing jobs. This growth was most obvious in two regions. Region 7W in Central Minnesota had just under 1,000 jobs added to durable goods employment and just under 500 to non-durable. The increases were generally spread throughout most of manufacturing rather than falling in one or two industries. In the Southeastern Region 10 there was an increase of about 1,600 jobs in Manufacturing. Of this increase about 1,300 jobs were created in durable goods with industrial machinery and equipment accounting for 55 percent of those jobs.

The Finance, Insurance and Real Estate industry grew in 1989 by 1,100 jobs for a 1.0 percent increase. This would normally not be large enough to be significant, except that 600 of these new jobs appeared in banking which had not seen an increase since 1986. Credit agencies other than banks reported employment down by about 100.

Transportation, Communication, and Public Utilities grew by 2,911 jobs. This increase is primarily from local and interurban transit and air transportation which, between them, increased by about 2,500 workers. The other sectors of this major industry grew slightly.

In spite of unfavorable drought type weather conditions for crop production during the summer of 1989, Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishing grew by 1,227 jobs led by increases in crop and livestock production. Cash grains led crop production, and poultry and eggs led livestock production.

Government grew 2.0 percent in 1989, increasing by almost 6,000 jobs. Of this increase 5,068 jobs came in Local Government and almost half of those, some 2,400 jobs, were in education.

Minnesota Employment in the 1980's

The decade of the 1980's exhibited marked changes in the industrial structure of the Minnesota economy. In Minnesota between 1979 and 1989 employment covered by the unemployment insurance program grew in all major industry divisions except Mining. This period of growth was interrupted by a recession in 1982 that affected each of the major industries, some more than others. Industries that were first to be affected and hardest hit by the recession were Manufacturing, Mining, Construction, and Trade. Industries least affected were Services and Finance, Insurance, and Real Estate.

The employment for the total state has increased steadily since 1983, however, expanding by 21.7 percent through 1989. The increases are spread across all industries except Mining:

	Employment Percent Change 1983 to 1989
All Industries	up 22%
Agriculture, Forestry, Fishing	up 29%
Mining	down 15%
Construction	up 31%
Manufacturing	up 15%
Transportation, Communication, Public Utilities	up 19%
Trade	up 20%
Finance, Insurance, Real Estate	up 20%
Services	up 34%
Government	up 16%

The Mining industry's losses have been in Iron Ore Mining which exists only in Greater Minnesota. Reduced demand for taconite which is used today in manufacturing steel has resulted in the loss of well-paying jobs in northeastern Minnesota. Employment began to decline in 1980 and continued through 1987 when a renewed demand for steel caused a slight upturn to begin in 1988.

Manufacturing has the most uneven employment growth pattern of the major industry divisions. Employment dropped to a very low level in 1982 and stayed there through 1983 because of production cutbacks in durable goods manufacturing, especially in the industrial and commercial machinery and computer equipment industry. This industry, listed as SIC 35 in the tables of this report, dropped 5,000 jobs between 1981 and 1982 and another 2,000 in 1983. Manufacturing employment declined again in 1986, once again because of problems in SIC 35.

The best kept secret in Manufacturing is the steady growth in printing and publishing. This industry, judging from the past, appears likely to continue to grow no matter what the economy does. Its average weekly wage of $441 in 1989, is above the total statewide unofficial $429, although below the $541 average in nondurable goods. Commercial printing, which includes offset, photo-offset, and photo lithographing, has added 7,100 employees since 1979 for a 59 percent increase. Desktop publishing, however, is a recent electronic development that could affect portions of commercial printing.

Transportation, Communications, and Public Utilities, which had trouble during the recession, has grown 14.7 percent since 1979. Within this industry division, trucking appears vulnerable. Between 1979 and 1983, trucking employment fell 12 percent. While it has risen 14 percent since then, between 1988 and 1989 it grew only 1 percent, down from 2 percent the previous year. The fate of transportation is tied closely to the ups and down of economic activity in other industries.

The biggest employment gain since 1983 has been in the Services industry. This division has risen by 163,500 new jobs and has moved from a third place ranking with 19 percent of the total state employment in 1979 to second place with 24 percent of the State's employment in 1989. (See Chart on page x). The bulk of the dramatic employment increase in this division comes primarily from health services, business services, and social services. Health services represents a third of the employment in the Services division. Included in this industry are medical and dental clinics, hospitals, nursing homes and other related services. More people are employed in providing health services in the State of Minnesota than are employed in any other industrial activity. The bulk of health services are provided by private firms. Government also provides health services. Combined they account for 195,636 or 9.7 percent of all covered employment in the State and $4,296,932,899 or 9.6 percent of all covered wages paid in the State. By comparison, education services (including private firms and government), rank second with employment of 147,939 and total wages of $3,526,419,897. Business services and social services are not as large as health services but both have experienced significant employment increases since 1983. They respectively employed 91,963 and 45,135 persons in 1989 compared to 61,957 and 30,887 in 1983.

Other smaller portions of the Services division that have gained the interest of analysts because of their phenomenal growth during the decade are consultants and charitable gambling. Consultants are a portion of the engineering and management industry. There were only 4,500 consultants in covered employment in 1979, but their number has doubled since then. Just over 80 percent of this industry is located in the Twin Cities Area and most of that in Hennepin County. Since the inception of charitable gambling in Minnesota, additional growth has come from the profusion of membership organization establishments that would not be covered under the unemployment compensation law were it not for their charitable gambling. Between 1988 and 1989, for example, membership organization employment increased by 1,300, or 6 percent.

Trade employment also suffered in the last recession, dropping 12,000 employees between 1979 and 1982 and reaching a low of 430,000 employees that continued into 1983. In 1982 every segment of Trade except miscellaneous retail fell by at least one percent. Although Trade has grown by 16 percent or 72,000 jobs since 1983, it grew only by 2 percent or 10,000 jobs between 1988 and 1989. The industry has not kept up with growth in other sectors of the economy, and its share of Minnesota's covered employment has fallen from 26.5 percent in 1979 to 25.5 percent in 1989.

Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishing, the smallest covered industry division in Minnesota, grew 29 percent between 1983 and 1989. This is, however, only 3,700 additional jobs and 1,600 of those were in lawn and garden services.

Finance, Insurance, and Real Estate rose 32 percent or 28,600 jobs between 1979 and 1989. Although other industry divisions experienced employment declines in 1982, this division did not. The Insurance industry saw a steady increase in employment during the 80's that added 11,500 jobs. Real Estate increased by 7,500 between 1979 and 1989. However, problems did occur within the Finance segment of the industry division as a result of Federal deregulation. Since 1987 a number of insolvent banks have been absorbed through mergers resulting in cuts in duplicate personnel. Other problems in the savings and loan industry have also contributed to reduced employment in the industry. The total loss to the Finance industry has been 1,600 jobs.

The weight of the 1982 recession fell more heavily on the Greater Minnesota area than the Minneapolis - St. Paul Metropolitan area. Manufacturing employment, for example, fell 5.5 percent or 13,500 jobs in the Metropolitan Area between 1979 and 1982 while Greater Minnesota lost 21,000 jobs, or 15.7 percent of its Manufacturing employment. The same situation was apparent in Trade where the Metropolitan Area lost 1.5 percent or 4,000 jobs, but Greater Minnesota lost 5.6 percent or 10,000 jobs.

Since 1983, however, the increase in Manufacturing employment has been larger in Greater Minnesota (up 28,900) than in the Metropolitan Area (up 23,383). This is particularly apparent in the manufacture of electronic products which are found in two industries: industrial machinery and equipment which includes computers, and is listed as SIC 35 in the tables; the other is electronic and other electric equipment, which is listed as SIC 36 in the tables. Both industries together, which include but are not limited to both computers and peripheral equipment, grew by 6,300 jobs between 1983 and 1989. Heaviest growth in electronic products came in those regions (6E, 7E, 9, and 10) that border the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area. Employment in those five regions grew by 6,700 between 1983 and 1989 while the Metropolitan Area lost 1,800 jobs during the same time period. The remaining portion of the increase occurred in the balance of Greater Minnesota where every region but 2 and 8 experienced some growth in electronic products.

Early growth in the Electronics industry came in the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area for two main reasons. Certainly part of this manufacturing growth pattern has to do with the fact that just over 50 percent of Minnesota's population lives in the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area. Without a large labor pool, growth is not possible. But the other important feature that supports growth near the Metropolitan Area is the transportation services offered. There is a major airport, two freeways, three major railroads, barges on the river, and hundreds of trucking firms to move supplies into the area and finished products out. Growth in electronics products manufacturing is likely to continue in the economic regions surrounding the Metropolitan Area where there is reasonable access to the labor pool, good transportation, and less expensive real estate.

As might be expected the growth in Trade has been stronger in the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area over the past ten years (up 60,000 jobs) than it has been in Greater Minnesota (up 26,000 jobs) because of the population distribution. In particular, bars and restaurants have increased their employment by 15,600 and department store employment has grown by 10,000 jobs since 1983 in the Metropolitan Area.

Throughout the 1980's, new industrial employment patterns appeared. A recession in 1982 was followed by steady employment growth. Mining employment was reduced drastically because of foreign competition and a reduced demand for steel. Recovery to former employment levels is unlikely. Manufacturing experienced instability in durable goods in the Minneapolis-St. Paul Metropolitan area as competition in the computer and electronics industries caused many of the larger companies to restructure and reduce costs through layoffs. However, smaller firms in areas bordering the Metropolitan Area have begun to experience expansion in durable goods manufacturing. Services has become the fastest growing industry in Minnesota and may surpass Trade as the leading employment division in the next decade. Health services has grown to such an extent that one out of 10 workers are now employed in providing health services. Likewise, one out of every $10 spent on wages in the State are health care wages. It appears that this upward trend will continue. Whether it will continue to expand as it did in the 1980's may depend on its affordability. The structural changes in the economy which began in the 1980's may continue to figure prominently in the decade of the 1990's. These past events provide insight to the kinds of changes that are likely to occur in the future.
