INTRODUCTION

The Minnesota Employment and Wages by Economic Region and County is published quarterly by the Research and Statistics Office of the Minnesota Department of Jobs and Training. The data contained in this publication includes two digits of industry detail wherever possible. To avoid violating data privacy laws and to maintain the mandated confidentiality of individual firm data it was necessary to combine industries wherever there are too few firms in an industry cell. For this reason, some counties show less industry detail than others.

The source of the information is data developed and analyzed by the Research and Statistics Office of the Minnesota Department of Jobs and Training. The data is selected from quarterly tax reports submitted by employers covered under the Minnesota unemployment compensation tax law. All individual employer data is confidential. The data selected is reviewed for accuracy and organized in accordance with the U.S. 1987 Standard Industrial Classification Manual. Approximately 97 percent of the total nonagricultural wage and salary employment in Minnesota is included. There are eight categories of workers excluded from coverage under Minnesota State law:

- 1) the self-employed;
- 2) farms with less than four employees in 20 weeks;
- 3) all railroad transportation employment;
- 4) insurance and real estate salespeople who work only on commission basis;
- 5) students working for the school while a full-time student;
- 6) those employed by a church or synagogue for religious work;
- 7) minor children, spouse and parents working for owner of a business;
- 8) elected officials at the Federal, State and Local levels of government.

TERMS

This section defines a number of key terms necessary to use this data.

The term units refers to the number of plant locations or work sites within the industry and county. For example, there are seven units of the U.S. Post Office in Morrison County.

Monthly employment is reported by job site, not residence of the employees and represents a count of workers on employer payrolls for the week including the 12th of the month.

Average employment is calculated by summing the three monthly figures and dividing by 3. Sub-totals do not necessarily add to totals because of rounding.

Total wages represent wages paid during the entire quarter.

The average weekly wage is calculated by dividing total wages paid by average employment and then dividing again by 13. Average weekly wage figures should be used with caution. Some industries have more temporary or part-time workers than others and this has the effect of lowering the average weekly wage. Also, average weekly wages in some industries may be high because of bonuses paid at the end of a year, or because lower-paid seasonal workers were laid off.

Unallocated employment is listed on page 31. It represents employment of traveling salespeople who have no attachment to a specific work site or those few employers who are not able to report multiple business locations separately.

MINNESOTA COVERED EMPLOYMENT FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1990

Minnesota's economy was sluggish in 1990. Covered employment rose by only 39,827 (2.0%) to an annual average of 2,061,505. This is the lowest rate of growth since the 1.5 percent increase between 1985 and 1986, when the first big downturn in computer manufacturing led to a loss of about 10,000 jobs in that segment of the economy.

More than one half of the job growth in Minnesota was in the SERVICE industries, with a net gain from a year ago of 20,285 (4.1%). Nearly every segment of this industrial division registered increases, with the largest coming in Health Services (6,600) and Social Services (3,320). Membership Organizations also increased in employment (2,300), largely as a result of charitable gambling.

GOVERNMENT employment rose by 7,667 (2.6%) over its 1989 level. Some of this increase occurred because of the 1990 census conducted by the Federal Government. While the temporary census employment was concentrated in the second quarter of the year, it averaged out to 1,380 jobs over the twelve month period. Most of rest of the new jobs occurred at the Local Government level.

Other industrial divisions that experienced notable increases in employment were TRANSPORTATION, COMMUNICATION AND PUBLIC UTILITIES (3,842), TRADE (3,715), and FINANCE, INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE (3,464). There were minimal increases in AGRICULTURE, FORESTRY AND FISHING, MINING, and CONSTRUCTION.

The only industrial division that experienced a net loss in employment was MANUFACTURING, with 1,254 fewer jobs than in 1989. The segment hit hardest was once again the Computer industry (SIC 357), which lost nearly 7,500 jobs in 1990. Employing over 50,000 people in 1985, this industry averaged only 34,900 jobs in 1990. The latest job loss in computer manufacturing was partially offset by increases in other manufacturing industries such as Printing and Publishing, Food and Kindred Products, Instruments and Related Products and Electronic Equipment.

SOME COMPARISONS WITH NEIGHBORING STATES

Disruptive economic conditions in the early 1980's caused some interesting fluctuations in employment in Minnesota and its neighboring states over the past decade. The change in total covered employment in each of the five states can be seen in the following table:

	1980	1990	CHANGE	GROWTH
MINNESOTA	1,710,266	2,061,505	351,239	20.5%
WISCONSIN	1,883,636	2,217,510	333,874	17.7%
IOWA	1,080,144	1,186,863	106,536	9.9%
SOUTH DAKOTA	226,009	274,194	48,185	21.3%
NORTH DAKOTA	225,752	245,736	19,984	8.9%

All five states experienced employment growth in this ten year span, but not without some setbacks. The recession of the early eighties affected each state, though in different ways and with different degrees of intensity. For example, compared to Iowa and Wisconsin, the two states closest to it in size of covered employment, Minnesota had a smaller total downturn at the beginning of the decade and a quicker turnaround. The following chart shows losses and gains in covered employment in each of the years since 1980.<sup>1</sup>

YEAR TO YEAR CHANGE IN COVERED EMPLOYMENT, 1981-1990

STATE	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990

As the chart shows, each state experienced at least two years with a net loss of jobs. North Dakota had the fewest total job losses, but also the fewest gains. The two Dakotas began the decade with about the same employment base, but South Dakota achieved employment gains almost two and a half times that of North Dakota. Iowa experienced the most years of employment loss, four, and did not begin a real recovery until 1987. Wisconsin, with the largest employment base of the five states, suffered the largest losses in the early part of the decade, but rebounded with fairly steady gains from 1984 on. As mentioned above, Minnesota began a recovery earlier than Iowa and Wisconsin, and despite the sluggishness of 1990 managed to add more jobs during the decade than even Wisconsin. The five state area added approximately 860,000 jobs over the last ten years, a 16.8 percent growth rate. Employment in Minnesota, Wisconsin and South Dakota grew at a faster rate, Iowa and North Dakota more slowly.

To look at it another way, in 1980 Wisconsin had 37.0 percent of the covered employment in these five states; Iowa had a 21.1 percent share, North and South Dakota 4.4 percent each. Now while Minnesota's share of covered employment in 1980 was 34.4 percent, of the employment growth occurring since then, 40.8 percent has been in Minnesota. The pie chart below shows each state's share of the employment growth since 1980.

Employment Change in the 5 State Area , 1980 - 1990

Each State's Share of the Employment Growth

EMPLOYMENT BY INDUSTRIAL DIVISION

More than 45 percent of the new jobs developed in the five state area over the last ten years have been in the SERVICE Industries. SERVICES has now overtaken MANUFACTURING to become the number two industry behind TRADE in size of employment. Minnesota and Wisconsin were first and second in both number of new jobs and rate of growth in SERVICES. A closer look reveals that one out of every four of these new jobs in Minnesota was in Health Services, followed by Business Services, Social Services, and Engineering and Management. Of further note, in each of the five states there was very little or no drop in employment in SERVICES during the recession years of 1981-1984.

TRADE accounted for about 26 percent of the job increase in this period. TRADE is the largest industry in all five states except Wisconsin, where it is still behind MANUFACTURING, but probably not for long. Indeed, Wisconsin led in both growth rate and total number of new jobs in TRADE to surpass Minnesota in total employment in this industry. Minnesota and South Dakota added jobs at about the same rate (17.5%), while Iowa and North Dakota grew more slowly.

Over 72,000 jobs were added in the FINANCE, INSURANCE, AND REAL ESTATE industries (F.I.R.E.), accounting for 8.1 percent of all new jobs in the five state area. Minnesota experienced the largest share of this growth (41.0%), reaching an average annual total of 122,358 in 1990, about 3,440 workers more than Wisconsin. Iowa had just 15 percent of the growth in these industries. Interestingly, North Dakota and South Dakota each had just over 11,000 workers in F.I.R.E. in 1980, but South Dakota added almost 5,100 employees, while North Dakota managed only 900 additional workers.

Despite the sales slump and resulting layoffs in its computer industry, Minnesota added more total employment in MANUFACTURING than any of the other four states. Wisconsin, with by far the largest employment in this industry, was hit hard by the recession of the early eighties, and lost more than 75,000 MANUFACTURING jobs by 1983. Despite a slow recovery through the eighties, employment at the end of the decade had still not reached its 1980 level. In Minnesota the effects of the recession seemed neither as deep, nor as lasting. MANUFACTURING here lost only 25,000 jobs by 1982 and rebounded to surpass its 1980 figures by 1984. It continued a gradual rise to an all time peak of 399,000 in 1989, before falling off a bit because of employment reductions in the computer business. Iowa seems to have been hit the hardest by the slump in MANUFACTURING. The low point in employment did not come until 1986 when 43,400 fewer Iowans were working in manufacturing jobs, 17.8 percent fewer than in 1980. As can be seen by the Growth Table on page vii, 1990 MANUFACTURING employment remains 4.0 percent below the 1980 level in Iowa. The Dakotas, with their relatively small MANUFACTURING industries, had minuscule dips in employment numbers in the early years of the decade. North Dakota then seemed to go into a period of dormancy in MANUFACTURING growth until experiencing small surges in 1988 and 1990. South Dakota, however, started to add new jobs in this industry as early as 1984, and by 1990 MANUFACTURING had grown by more than 30 percent.

The cyclical nature of the CONSTRUCTION industry makes it difficult to interpret differences between any two years of employment, but patterns can be seen over time. Minnesota and Wisconsin both showed high employment in construction in 1980 followed by a sharp drop in the recession years of 1981-1983, and then a fairly rapid rise to exceed their 1980 figures from 1987 through 1990. Iowa and South Dakota showed a similar pattern in the early years of the decade, but the bottoming out period lasted much longer. South Dakota did not exceed its 1980 employment level until 1990, and Iowa has yet to do so. CONSTRUCTION in North Dakota was the one exception to this general pattern. Employment there did drop somewhat in 1981, but then rose again and actually peaked at an average of 17,355 in 1983 when the other four states were near their lowest CONSTRUCTION employment levels of the decade. Employment fell rapidly after that and has averaged only 10,520 since 1985.

The recession of the early eighties saw a reduction in the demand for Minnesota iron ore and caused the loss of over 9,500 MINING jobs in the state between 1980 and 1986, a 60 percent drop in employment. During the slight recovery through 1990, only about 2,000 of those jobs were reinstated. North Dakota saw a similar loss in MINING due to a reduced demand for coal and lignite. This smallest of the industrial divisions had the dubious distinction of being the only industry to lose employment in all five states. However, only in North Dakota does MINING represent more than one percent of total 1990 covered employment.

GOVERNMENT experienced a downturn in employment in the early years of the decade, at least in the three more populous states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. But those lost jobs were rapidly replaced in Minnesota and Wisconsin. By 1990 there were 60,000 more government workers in the five states than in 1980. More than half of this growth happened in Minnesota. Indeed, the difference in government growth between Minnesota and Wisconsin accounts for nearly all of the difference in total growth between them, so that growth in the private sector was nearly equal.

Employment rose in all three levels of GOVERNMENT in Minnesota from 1984 on. The 3,000 more Federal employees were almost all with the United States Postal Service. Of the more than 6,700 increase in state employment, approximately 1,500 were with State Hospitals and Nursing Homes, 1,100 with Justice, Public Order, and Safety, and 500 apiece in Administration of Human Resource Programs and Environmental and Housing Programs. Because most Local Government units have not until recently reported employment in much detail (and some do not as yet), it is difficult to tell where most of the almost 22,000 new employees are. However, local education, which lost 10,000 jobs between 1980 and 1983, added nearly 17,000 between 1983 and 1990 to account for about one third of the total increase.

SUMMARY

In each of the five states under discussion, more new employment was created in the SERVICE industries during the past decade than in any other industrial division. Indeed, in Iowa over 58 percent of the net new jobs were in SERVICES, in Minnesota 47 percent, North Dakota 48 percent, Wisconsin 43 percent and South Dakota 39 percent. This division in 1990 represented 22.9 percent of covered employment in the five state area compared to 18.7 percent ten years before.

MANUFACTURING did not fare as well during the past decade. In 1980, 23.8 percent of covered employment in the five state area was in MANUFACTURING. By 1990 that figure had fallen to 20.8 percent. Two states actually lost a net number of jobs in MANUFACTURING, and only Minnesota and South Dakota had any significant gain in employment.

While comparable 1990 data for the nation was not available, a comparison of 1980 and 1989 national figures revealed a similar, but even stronger trend. Employment in SERVICES nationwide was up more than 50 percent from its 1980 level and represented 23.5 percent of total covered employment by 1989. MANUFACTURING jobs were down more than 5 percent and represented only 18.1 percent of covered employment.
