State budget

What's in the state's budget and why are there so many problems getting it right? State Budget Director Brian Roherty briefly explained the budget process to Governmental Operations Committee members at a Jan. 21 meeting.

According to Roherty, two-thirds of all state income has two sources--state sales tax and individual income tax. Over three-fourths of that revenue goes right back to local governments for education and property tax relief.

Roherty suggests reasons for the budget gap legislators face. Two years ago, Minnesota had a $450-million reserve that no longer exists. And, he says, "timebombs" are a problem--the legislature and the governor enact future commitments into law, but don't provide money for them in the current biennium. These commitments total more than $600 million going into 1988 and 1989.

Roherty says the governor's budget will answer the question of how to get spending down $1 billion and/or raise taxes to cover the budget gap.

Governor Perpich will present his budget proposal Jan. 27.

Teacher turnover

One-half of Minnesota's teachers will quit teaching during their first seven years, Commissioner of Education Ruth Randall said Jan. 21.

Randall told Education Committee members that teachers' salaries and working conditions make teachers feel powerless compared to professionals in other occupations. School administrations have to stop telling teachers how to teach and start letting them play a more professional role, she said.

"We shouldn't have teachers in checking bathrooms and monitoring halls and doing the kinds of things they're doing now," Randall said. "Instead they should be using their expertise to actually work on the two processes of teaching and learning."

Randall said that the Governor's Discussion Group report suggests state incentive programs for schools that will place teachers in role-making positions that match their

The State Capitol, as we know it today, is Minnesota's third Capitol building.

The first, in 1853, was a plain two-story building. When it burned in 1881, a Romanesque-style structure replaced it. In 1893, after this building proved too small, efforts to build a larger Capitol began. Architects throughout the nation submitted plans for it, but St. Paul architect Cass Gilbert and his Italian Renaissance design won the competition. Work began in 1896, and nine years later, the Legislature met for the first time in what is one of the most beautiful Capitols in the United States.

knowledge. She said Minnesota needs to change to attract and keep the best and brightest people as teachers for our children.

Highway funding resolution

A resolution urging Congress to free up federal highway monies moved out of the Transportation Committee Jan. 21. Rep. Alice Johnson (DFL-Spring Lake Park) sponsors HF66 which will go next to the House floor for action.

Last session, Congress failed to extend the federal-aid highway program which expired last September. Under the program, states get federal aid for road work. For Minnesota, this means over $250 million.

Testifying in favor of the bill, Roger Borg from the Federal Highway Administration said, "Many states, Minnesota included, have only the money left over from last year's budget to spend on road projects.

"Swift action by Congress early in the 1987 session is necessary, or Minnesota could lose the '87 construction season...and a number of important interstate projects that need to be finished."

Leonard Levine, newly appointed commissioner of transportation, talked directly about the impact on Minnesota. He said, "If Congress doesn't appropriate federal funds by March, we could lose $70 million. Anytime thereafter, Minnesota would stand to lose $90 million."

The U.S. House of Representatives is expected to take action on the highway program soon.

New Courts building

Minnesota Supreme Court Justice Lawrence Yetka told the Appropriations Committee Jan. 21 that legislators should let the judiciary have a new building.

He says it's time the Legislature approve plans, 74 years in the making, for a building to house Minnesota's Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, hearing rooms, law library, judges' chambers, and administrative offices. Presently, the Supreme Court is in the State Capitol, the Court of Appeals rents space in Amhoist Tower, and administrative offices are in other St. Paul buildings. Rented space for the courts costs $250,000 per year.

The proposed $44 million judicial complex would include remodeling the 38,000-square-foot Minnesota Historical Society building just east of the Capitol, and building a 128,000-square-foot addition to it.

Though the Legislature has given money over the years to study, plan, and design a courts building, lawmakers have not approved money for its construction. Yetka says that's because "There are no large lobbying groups to urge the legislature to provide facilities for the judicial system." He added, "The Legislature is not just another department of the executive or a semi-state agency. It is a co-equal branch of government, and one branch (the Legislature) should help another branch (the Judiciary) do its job more efficiently."

New historical center

Nina Archabal, acting director of the Minnesota Historical Society (MHS), told the Appropriations Committee Jan. 21 that MHS needs a new building to better serve the public.

The $57.7 million plan, designed by a Minneapolis architectural firm, includes museum galleries; a central reference room for manuscripts, newspapers, documents, photographs, and artifacts; temperature and humidity controlled storage space; an auditorium; meeting rooms; and a restaurant.

"We have to turn school groups away because we just don't have the space," she said of the present MHS building east of the Capitol. MHS moved into that building nearly 80 years ago when goals weren't as public-oriented as they are today, says Archabal. The building may become part of a proposed courts complex Minnesota Supreme Court Justice Lawrence Yetka presented to the Appropriations Committee on Jan. 21 (see "New Courts building").

The 1985 Legislature allowed MHS to buy the $5 million Miller Hospital site in St. Paul for a new building. But before construction can begin, the 1987 Legislature needs to approve the cost and design.

Welfare reform goals

Welfare reform proposals for Minnesota are "rather modest," according to Human Services Commissioner Sandra Gardebring. The commissioner outlined the department's goals Jan. 20 at a Health and Human Services Committee meeting.

Gardebring says reforms focus on groups such as teenage mothers and long-term welfare recipients. Some of the reforms would:

- create more jobs for welfare recipients;
- put more money into childcare for those receiving AFDC funds while training for jobs; and
- create formal links among training programs for AFDC recipients, AVTIs, and community colleges.

"I would characterize these proposals as rather modest," said Gardebring. "I understand that perhaps some who are interested in this issue were expecting something far more revolutionary."

Gardebring says that even though some welfare reform advocates say the proposals fall far short of the mark, the department doesn't lack the courage, creativity, and commitment to find new and better ways of doing things. She says the department's goal is to help people reach their maximum level of self-sufficiency.

Adoption agency records

Couples who want to adopt a child would have access to certain adoption agency records under a bill the Judiciary Committee heard Jan. 20.

The bill's author, Rep. Bob Milbert (DFL-South St. Paul), says HF41 attempts to let people examine agency records on their suitability as adoptive parents. Right now, the law allows access to suitability records only after the agency has rejected a couple's adoption application.

Speaking in favor of the bill, Bob DeNardo from Catholic Charities, said, "We see it as a joint process. There's no reason that...couples should not know, and do not know the questions that we have as we're having them."

The proposed changes still allow courts to withhold the identity of individuals who provide information for the files.

The committee plans to act on the bill Jan. 27.

AVTIs' changing role

The average age of students in Minnesota Area Vocational Technical Institutes (AVTIs) is going up each year. It's currently about 27, says Joe Graba, state AVTI director.

Graba says economic and technological changes are forcing more adults back to school. And he says the "elementary school model" requiring students to start programs in September and devote six hours a day, five days a week to class has to change to meet the needs of older students.

"The thirty-five-year-olds that have car payments and house payments and insurance payments and groceries to buy and medical bills cannot afford to wait until next September to start their programs," Graba says. "Yet that's how we continue to operate the system."

He says part-time programs with a flexible delivery system could be the answer. Possible changes for AVTIs could include:

- conversion to course credit system from the present class hour system;
- part-time programs with flexible starting dates; and
- increased cooperation with colleges and universities to ease transfer procedures.

Graba made his remarks at a Jan. 20 meeting of the Education Division of the Appropriations Committee.

Economic trends, outlook

Low wages could be good for Minnesota's rural communities, Wilbur Maki, professor of agricultural and applied economics at the University of Minnesota, says.

He spoke to the Economic Development and Housing Committee about the state's current economy, job trends, and economic outlook, Jan. 19. Maki said, "The fact that earnings are one-third less in rural areas than in urban areas is a benefit to greater Minnesota in attracting industries. I consider it an opportunity."

But Maki also says that manufacturing isn't providing jobs to unemployed farmers now as it did in the '70s. He says manufacturing industries are down in Minnesota because of the U.S. dollar's high value and loss of markets to foreign competitors.

But some industries, such as office equipment manufacturing, business services, and health services are growing in Minnesota, according to Maki. Minnesota should make the most of this growth, but should also "restructure job requirements in manufacturing to improve our competitive position in world markets," he says.

And what should state government do to improve Minnesota's economy? According to Maki, the state should establish applied research centers to study product development. He also says colleges, universities, and vocational schools should focus on improving Minnesota's economy and train students for jobs.

Interest buydown program

The interest buydown bill, HF1, won preliminary approval from members of the Agriculture Finance Division of the Agriculture Committee Jan. 20.

The vote came after division members adopted a delete-everything amendment that trimmed dollar amounts and extended the program for one year. When Rep. Katy Olson (DFL-Sherburn) first introduced the bill, it called for $38 million to extend the program for the next two fiscal years. It also covered the program's present $14-million deficit, and provided $3 million for the farm mediation program that the University of Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service administers.

The bill now goes to the full Agriculture Committee. Its present version provides $20 million to extend the interest buydown program for one year and the $14-million deficit payment. It sets a cap of $12 thousand on the total interest subsidy a farmer can receive. It no longer carries monies for the farm mediation program.

The mediation and interest buydown programs were part of the farm aid package the Legislature passed a year ago. The buydown program calls for lenders and the state to work together to make spring-operating credit available to farmers at affordable rates of interest.

Minnesota Trade Office

The Minnesota Trade Office won't be in the hands of the Agriculture Department under a bill likely to come before the Legislature.

According to testimony at the Agriculture, Transportation, Semi-State Division meeting Jan. 20, Governor Perpich's push to reorganize the state's three trade agencies prompted the Department of Energy and Economic Development (DEED) to put together the proposed legislation.

The purpose of the Trade Office is to promote foreign and domestic trade. For the last three years, the office has actively provided pre-export capital to qualifying small firms selling to foreign markets. Minnesota is the first state in the nation to have such a program.

Under the proposed plan, DEED would oversee the trade office. The Department of Public Service would handle energy projects. And the Trade Office would work with the World Trade Center, matching foreign companies with Minnesota firms.

Supporters say the merger would avoid duplication and make Minnesota the most integrated and centralized international trade unit in the country.

The House Thursday, Jan. 22 passed a resolution proclaiming Jan. 25-31 as Young Astronaut Week and Jan. 28 as Challenger Day in Minnesota.

•Also passed resolution expressing the sense of the Minnesota House of Representatives that the governments of the United States and Socialist Republic of Vietnam take all action to determine persons missing in action and/or held as prisoners of war in East Asia.

•Another resolution passed expressing sense of the House that the United States Congress propose an amendment to the United States Constitution to protect human life. Also passed resolution requiring establishment of an affirmative action plan and designating an affirmative action officer for the Minnesota House of Representatives.

•House rereferred to the General Legislation, Veterans' Affairs, and Gaming Committee, a resolution congratulating the citizens of Bemidji on the 50th anniversary of Paul Bunyan's arrival to their waterfront.

•Also rereferred a concurrent resolution protesting use of the National Guard in Central America to the General Legislation, Veterans' Affairs, and Gaming Committee.

Pull tabs wouldn't be taxed upfront until Aug. 1 under HF64 (Kostohryz, DFL-St. Paul). On Jan. 22, General Legislation, Veterans Affairs and Gaming Committee members approved the proposed delay of the new 10 percent tax which would change 1986 law. The bill now goes to the House.

As overviews in House committees continue, directors of legislative commissions described their functions before the State Departments Division of the Appropriations Committee Jan. 22.

Glenn Nelson, state economist, and Lee Munnich, deputy commissioner of the Department of Energy and Economic Development, presented their views of Minnesota's economy to the Economic Development and Housing Committee Jan. 22.

Metropolitan government agencies' chairs and directors briefed the Metropolitan Affairs Committee Jan. 21 on their activities and concerns. Tom Todd, House researcher/legal analyst, gave an overview of metropolitan government and finance.

Representative Bill Schreiber (IR-Brooklyn Park) and Senator Bill Luther (DFL-Brooklyn Park) joined State Finance Commissioner Jay Kiedrowski to discuss the state budget and its impact on Minnesota counties at the 87th annual Conference of the Association of Minnesota Counties, Jan. 20.

Minnesota ranks 27th in the nation for total AFDC recipients per 1,000 of the state's population, well below the national average, according to 1985 figures from a Minnesota Department of Human Services report. AFDC recipients make up about 3.5 percent of Minnesota's total population. (See Highlight: "Welfare reform goals")

Do You Know

The Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Minnesota establish the principles under which government functions.

To be a candidate for the State Legislature, the Minnesota Constitution states that a person must:

- be a qualified Minnesota voter;
- live in Minnesota for at least one year before the election;
- live in the election district for at least six months immediately preceding the election; and
- be at least 21 years of age.

(Minnesota Constitution, Article IV, Section 6, and Article VII, Section 6)
