State Courts' budget

Minnesota's court system needs more money to buy computers and hire staff, according to Sue Dosal, state court administrator. She told the State Departments Division of the Appropriations Committee Feb. 5 the system needs both to give the public faster court service.

State Courts' budget requests include $1.5 million to expand the computer service Trial Court Information System to 28 additional counties. Under the proposal, computer center headquarters would be in Beltrami, Blue Earth, Itasca, Kandiyohi, Lyon, and Winona counties. Dosal says the computer system improves financial and records management, makes court administration more efficient, and helps the courts respond better to public need.

Dosal also asks legislators to grant funding for six additional Supreme Court clerks. Dosal says that even though the Supreme Court's caseload has decreased since the establishment of the Court of Appeals in 1983, the Court's workload has increased because only the most difficult cases make it to the Supreme Court.

In addition, the judiciary asks that legislators continue the 1986 Family Farm Legal Assistance Program, offering legal advice to Minnesota farmers in financial trouble.

Investment board

The State Board of Investment will have greater investment flexibility if the Legislature approves HF186 (Simoneau, DFL-Fridley).

Howard Bicker, executive director, presented the board's recommendations in HF186 to the Governmental Operations Committee Feb. 5.

Bicker says HF186 would give the board the authority to purchase certain high-yield debt obligations and foreign securities. He says this would allow the board to enhance investment returns without adding to investment risk.

It's the board's bill, says Bicker, and "we're requesting additional flexibility that we believe in the long run will enhance our ability to..."
maximize the total rate of return."

The bill would also require the board to adopt an investment policy statement. Bicker says the statement would provide guidelines to assure that any future changes in either the make up of the board or staff would maintain the policies the board has in place.

The committee recommended the bill to pass. It goes next to the full House.

Interest buydown program

Farmers who qualify may pay only half the interest on their loans again this year. HF1 (Olson, K., DFL-Sherburn), the interest buydown bill, won approval in the Appropriations Committee Feb. 4.

The interest buydown program goes back to 1985. That year, over 1,000 farmers got operating loans. Changes to the program came in 1986, and its popularity grew. Farm borrowers exhausted its $5 million appropriation in 10 days, and as a result, the Department of Commerce returned hundreds of loan applications. Later, when the program reopened, more than 6,000 farmers got loans. The higher-than-expected demand for farm loans ran the state $14 million in the hole.

Under HF1, as amended in the Agriculture, Transportation, and Semi-State Division Feb. 2, the commissioner of commerce could not accept loan applications after the program has spent its $20 million in appropriated funds. Legislators say this should prevent future deficits. Other provisions in the bill would extend the buydown program for another year and provide for payment of the program's $14-million deficit. It also sets a $12,500 cap on the total interest subsidy a farmer can get.

Representatives will vote on the bill next week on the House floor.

Farm mediation program

The Minnesota farmer-lender mediation program works according to farm mediators who testified at the Agriculture Committee's Agriculture Finance Division meeting Feb. 4.

"Farmers and lenders are meeting at the table to restructure debts to head off foreclosures. It's my job to even out the sides of the table," says Ward Nefstead, a volunteer mediator from Waseca.

Nefstead says he has settled 90 percent of his cases. He says mediation works if people make a commitment to the process. The mediation program allows farmers facing foreclosure to meet with lenders for up to 60 days to settle debt problems. Mediators schedule these meetings and guide the discussion.

According to a status report from the University of Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service mediation has settled over 1,000 cases. As of Jan. 2, some 3,000 farmers requested mediation statewide. Fifty-one percent of the requests came from farmers in Southwestern Minnesota.

Higher ed teamwork

The Education Division of the Appropriations Committee looked at the Higher Education Advisory Council (HEAC) plan to improve student education while strengthening state institutions. At the division's Feb. 4 meeting, questions focused on transfer of credits, educational access, and state funding.

Gerald Christenson, HEAC Chair, says the Council's mission differentiation plan would still provide educational access to students in the state, but not at every institution. He says the University, state universities, community colleges, and AVTTs would each have an area of specialization. He says changes would more fully use Minnesota's community college and state university systems.

The plan to decrease University of Minnesota enrollment would really serve undergraduate students better, according to Christenson. "I don't see where it serves the people of the state to have 2,500 students sitting in an auditorium at the University of Minnesota watching a video tape," he says. "Is that quality? We think the vast majority of freshmen and sophomores would receive as good an education, and in many cases a better education at a community college or state university."

Christenson says joint admission could better serve students who want to attend the University. A proposed plan would automatically admit students to upper division courses at the University after completing general course requirements at a community college or state university.

Rep. John Rose (IR-Roseville) says encouraging college transfer brings back across the board problem involving transfer of credits. "I think the problem is that there are some people out there that are either ill advised, misinformed, or they assume too much," he said. "When they go to school, they think the whole state system is intermingled and that if they take classes here or there they'll transfer anywhere."

Christenson says it's a problem that will never go away, but the systems are working to bridge credit transfer gaps. A recent agreement will make transfers between community colleges and state universities easier, he said. Also, he said a similar agreement is in the works between community colleges and the University of Minnesota.

Aging veterans

The national American Legion commander says current state and federal veterans programs are dragging behind the needs of aging veterans.

Commander James P. "Jimmy" Dean shared his personal observations and concerns about veterans programs at a joint meeting of the House General Legislation, Veterans Affairs, and Gaming Committee and the Senate Veterans Committee Feb. 4.

Dean says federal program dollars have been shrinking for the past 10 years, while needs for hospital and nursing home care have grown quickly. Although Congress keeps passing veterans’ legislation, he says, they know the Veterans Administration will tighten its belt if there isn’t enough money to back the services.

"We cannot continue to shrink the services offered to 2.7 million veterans in the United States," says Dean. He hopes Minnesota can help fund programs needed by veterans.

Pipeline Safety Act

The Minnesota Pipeline Safety Act got a favorable recommendation from the Environment and Natural Resources Committee Feb. 3. HF91 addresses safety issues that arose after the gas pipeline explosion in Mounds View last summer.

The bill would create a statewide notification center that excavators could call to locate underground lines before digging. Supporters say this will help cut down on accidents and damage to underground lines.

Another provision in the bill would create the Office of Pipeline Safety. One of the duties of the office would be to promote the 9-1-1 telephone system to notify emergency responders of pipeline releases. It would also work with local emergency management and civil defense groups to train personnel and develop emergency response plans.

No one opposed the bill at this hearing. It goes next to the Transportation Committee.

Welfare reform

One welfare reform goal in Minnesota is to help people on welfare rolls become self-sufficient, says Randy Johnson, co-chair of the Governor’s Commission on Welfare Reform. Johnson, who is also Hennepin County Commissioner, spoke to members of the Health and Human Services Committee Feb. 3.

He says the system should encourage welfare recipients to get out of the poverty cycle. He says, "Instead of a system that asks, 'How comfortable can we make you while you're on it?', the focus has to be, 'How can we help you get off the system?' or 'How can the system help you become as self-sufficient as possible?'"

Johnson says reform would focus on young mothers and long-term recipients. Reform would also create greater case management and require recipients to take self-sufficiency programs and develop self-sufficiency plans.

Drunk driving

Drunk driving on Minnesota roads has been cut in half in the past 10 years. That's the good news, Forst Lowery, state alcohol safety coordinator, told the Judiciary Committee's Crime and Family Law Division Feb. 2.

Multiple offenders are the hard-core problem, according to Lowery. More than 20,000 Minnesota drivers have been arrested three or more times for DWI. Lowery says Minnesota probably does the best job of any state in meeting the DWI problem through good laws, enforcement, and getting problem drinkers into treatment.

But, he says, that's not enough. Minnesota should do a better job of preventing drunk driving instead of just catching, punishing, and treating one out of 100 people. Lowery suggests the state consider efforts to:
- encourage or require commercial licensed sellers and private social hosts to serve alcohol responsibly;
- promote and encourage efforts to deglamorize heavy drinking;
- increase social acceptance of not drinking;
- provide drug and alcohol education for children in early grades;
- find ways to separate drinking occasions from driving occasions; and
- consider public or alternative transportation in locating and licensing drinking places.

The division expects to hear prevention proposals soon.

Criminal trials

The prosecution and defense lined opposite sides of the room, as a bill proposing changes to criminal trial procedure had its first hearing Feb. 3. HF137 (Kelly, DFL-St. Paul), drew some 30 people to the Judiciary Committee to testify for and against it.

The bill would allow the court, in most cases, to jointly try two or more defendants in court for the same crime. It would also allow the prosecution a chance to respond to the defendant's closing argument. And, in certain cases, it would give the prosecution and defense the same number of chances to challenge and remove a juror without explaining why.

Supporters claim the bill is one way to head off increasing crime rates and to better respond to crime victims' needs. Opponents claim the legislation's not needed—that the courts should have the right to set their own rules and procedures.

Testimony will continue at the next Judiciary Committee meeting, Feb. 10.

Minimum wage

Joe Samarging, commissioner of jobs and training, says Minnesota lawmakers should raise the minimum wage. He discussed jobs and training with the Economic Development and Housing Committee Feb. 3.

When asked about his position on minimum wage, Samargia said, "I think it's really difficult for anybody that's sitting in this room to say they could work for $3.35 and make a living. I don't think any one of us could." He pointed out that the minimum wage has been the same for six years, even though cost of living has gone up. "The issue should be debated in Washington," Samargia said.

Workers' rights

Jay Benanav, assistant commissioner of labor and industry, says his department is primarily concerned with protecting workers' rights.

At the Unemployment Compensation and Workers' Compensation Division of the Labor-Management Committee meeting Feb. 2, Benanav explained the process of making a worker's compensation claim.

The Department of Labor and Industry not only helps workers, but also employers, insurance companies, and doctors understand workers' compensation laws. But, Benanav says, the department spends most of its time helping workers because they often don't know the laws.

Technology development

Executives from high-tech corporations and experts in technology development told the new Future and Technology Committee Feb. 2, that Minnesota needs to position itself for future technology-intensive industries.

Don Sullivan, president and CEO, MTS Systems and member of the Minnesota High Tech Council, says the state needs to strengthen education in science and technology, starting in kindergarten. He also says the state needs to put heavier emphasis on research programs in state universities. "For the state to develop technology-intensive industries in greater Minnesota, we need to invest in our universities. Industry in greater Minnesota will not grow unless there is a university around," says Sullivan.

Herbert Johnson, president of the Minnesota Technology Corridor Corp., says the objective of the corridor is to encourage and foster the development of technology-intensive industry in the state. And corridor supporters want to spin off technology-intensive companies in greater Minnesota.

The corporation is a joint effort including Minneapolis, the University of Minnesota, the state, and private industry. The corridor is an area between the University of Minnesota and the Minneapolis downtown business district. It hosts and helps develop high-tech companies. The corridor's first major development came in 1986 with the completion of the Supercomputer Center.

Attorney General's Office

Attorney General Skip Humphrey requests a $2.5 million budget increase for his office in 1988-89. He presented his proposal to the State Departments Division of the Appropriations Committee Feb. 2.

Humphrey says his top priorities include computerizing the Attorney General's Office for greater efficiency, and increasing attorneys' salaries.

Also, he says, starting salaries at the Attorney General's Office are $4,000 less than other public law firms, and $15,000 less than private firms. Elected public lawyers in metropolitan counties and at the University of Minnesota make $5,000-$15,000 more than lawyers in the Attorney General's Office. Humphrey says the Legislature needs to correct these salary disparities so the office can attract and keep top lawyers.
Sixty-five percent of state's poor live outside the seven-county metropolitan area, according to Governor's Commission on Poverty report. The report says number of people living in poverty in the state has gone up 100,000 since 1979 to about 475,000.

New commissioner of energy and economic development, David Speer, presented department's program to the Economic Development and Housing Committee Jan. 29.

Members of the Future and Technology Committee will take a high technology tour Tuesday, Feb. 10 from 2 to 5 p.m. Tour sites include Pillsbury Co., Life Corporation, and University of Minnesota Super Computer Institute. For transportation, members will meet at front entrance of the State Office Building.

Artists from across the country (60 Minnesotans) will showcase and sell their work for five days in April, Sam Grabarski told members of the Agriculture, Transportation, Semi-State Division Feb. 4. Grabarski, executive director of the Minnesota State Arts Board, says American Craft Enterprise selected Minnesota to sponsor one of four national craft fairs. Show's at the St. Paul Civic Center April 8 - 12.

On a scale of zero to 10, Minnesota farmers give AVTIs a rating of 8. According to John Ostrem that's because AVTIs have beefed up agricultural programs--adding 19 management programs to their curricula. Ostrem from the State Board of Vocational Technical Institutes says farmers who take the programs better their chances of staying in business. He spoke to the Agriculture Committee Feb. 2.

Department of health commissioner, Sister Mary Madonna Ashton, brought her department's budget to the Health and Human Services Division/Appropriations Feb. 2 and 3.

Some of hottest issues this session are minimum wage, prior notice of plant closings, workers' compensation, and unemployment compensation, said members of the Labor Management Relations Committee. Discussion came at Feb. 3 meeting when leaders from Minnesota Retail Merchants Association, Minnesota AFL-CIO, Department of Employee Relations, and Department of Labor and Industry gave overviews of their organizations.

Revenue Commissioner Tom Triplett presented the Governor's budget and tax initiatives to the Taxes Committee Jan. 29 and Feb. 5. Committee discussed income tax, property tax, and corporate tax reform. Triplett urged action on income tax reform legislation in '87, in accordance with '86 federal reform.

Drunk driving costs Minnesota taxpayers $40 million a year--$1,000 for each drunk driving arrest. Cost is $3,000 to $7,000 for the average person who finds him/herself under arrest on a DWI charge. Drunk drivers spend nearly 200,000 days in jail per year, an average of about five days each. Repeat drunk drivers take up 11 percent of Minnesota jail capacity at a average cost of $38 per day. (Statistics from committee testimony by Minnesota Department of Public Safety).

Last week the DAV withdrew a request for $25,000 in state funds. (see "Notes," Session Weekly, Jan. 30, 1987). Feb. 4, the House recognized DAV action by adopting House Resolution 14 commending the Disabled American Veterans Department "for outstanding service and their willingness to continue this service without financial aid from the state of Minnesota for this biennium."

Local government aid may take a cut if legislators back the governor's budget recommendations, says Steve Hinze, a House researcher. Hinze spoke at the Feb. 5 Local and Urban Affairs Committee meeting. He says the governor's recommendations call for across-the-board cuts of about 1.5 percent, and a phase-out of the aid program by 1988.

Do You Know

When the first Legislature found itself without a governor and without a state, members solved the problem by declaring Territorial Governor Samuel Medary both de facto (existing, but not by legal establishment) and de jure (by right or legal establishment) governor of Minnesota.

They also declared they would legalize their acts upon admission of the state into the Union. On March 25, 1858, they recessed until June 2, and finally adjourned Aug. 12 after passing some important measures. Among those, the famous, much-protested, $5 million loan bill to aid the construction of railroads and provide a basis for banking in Minnesota.

Although the first Legislature had solved its governorless, stateless dilemma, the duly elected first governor of the new state of Minnesota, Henry H. Sibley, never signed the first 124 bills the Legislature passed. He signed his first bill into law June 10, 1858.

Happy Diamond Jubilee!
