Although the date of Easter changes from year to year, the Easter Break at the state Capitol is etched in stone. And at the Legislature, it's a lot more than a holiday where members return home.

It's often the last reality check for lawmakers hunkered down in the Capitol complex — which is known for creating its own reality — before the legislative session adjourns.

Back home, people usually aren't shy about letting lawmakers know how they feel about issues being discussed at the state Capitol. Across Minnesota this weekend, legislators will be fielding questions while at church, grocery shopping, or even raking leaves.

And the results of those conversations are sometime later felt in law. Probably the best example was in 1987 when lawmakers returned to the Capitol following that year's Easter Break with axes in hand. Several conservative DFLers, after "listening to the people," balked at a proposed tax increase and voted as a caucus to trim it by $200 million. "A revolt against liberalism" was how one conservative DFL member referred to the stormy caucus meeting that led to the cuts.

Two years later, business leaders apparently tried to duplicate that insurrection. Just before the Easter Break in 1989, several major business groups waged a massive advertising campaign that called for a $900 million cut in the proposed state budget. They gave all 201 legislators red caps with the slogan, "Put a Cap on State Spending," emblazoned on the front.

The campaign fell flat — further proof that nothing works the same way twice in politics.

What will legislators hear this Easter? It's a fair bet to assume that property taxes — particularly the proposal to double the rate at which low-valued homes are taxed — will be among the hottest topics.

Conventional wisdom holds that voting for such a tax increase would be politically difficult; some would say tantamount to political death. With such a blemish on a voting record, rebirth in two or four years could well be a political miracle.

Revenue forecast: partly cloudy

Minnesota's chief financial official March 28 said the state is still in a deep fiscal hole, but not as far down as previously thought.

State Finance Commissioner John Gunyou predicts there likely will be an additional $77 million available to help lawmakers balance the state's $1.2 billion budget shortfall over the next two years.

Gunyou says state revenues are expected to be up about $58.4 million over earlier estimates while state spending, based on Gov. Arne Carlson's proposed budget for the upcoming budget cycle, should be about $18.3 million less than first anticipated.

That adds up to almost $77 million more than was previously thought, but only a fraction of what's needed to balance the state budget in the next biennium.

Gunyou says the nation's economic downturn, which sparked the state revenue decline should continue until early summer. He adds that while victory in the Persian Gulf conflict did not end the recession, the war's quick end should reduce its adverse impact.

Carlson is expected to issue a revised spending package to legislators next week, detailing where he believes the extra money should go.

"It's a reasonable assumption that the governor and the Legislature will want to spend that $77 million," Gunyou says.

Legislative reaction to the revenue forecast was guardedly optimistic. Rep. Wayne Simoneau (DFL-Fridley) says that while the extra $77 million is relatively small when compared to the state's $15 billion overall budget, "the bright spot is [the state's economy] didn't get any worse."

Simoneau, chair of the House Appropriations Committee, says it's likely lawmakers will move to add more money into health and human service programs, as well as higher education — both of which were targeted for cuts, among many other areas, in Carlson's proposed budget.

House Minority Leader Rep. Terry Dempsey (IR-New Ulm) says the bulk of the additional money should be targeted for property tax relief, particularly for farmland and low- and moderate-income homeowners.

But Dempsey says he can't predict how he and other lawmakers will ultimately divide the windfall.

"I suspect there will be 200 other suggestions on where this money should go," he says.

Law

Parental notification bill

A movement to change Minnesota's 1981 law that requires pregnant minors to notify both parents at least 48 hours before having an abortion cleared its first hurdle in the House March 28.

The Judiciary Committee's Family Law Subcommittee approved HF512 that would allow only one parent to be advised before a minor decides to have an abortion. A similar bill is pending on the Senate floor.

The measure authored by Rep. Kathleen Vellenga (DFL-St. Paul) comes less than a year after the Minnesota Parental Notification Law was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court on a 5-4 vote.

Jackie Schweitz, spokeswoman for Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life, objected to the bill, saying that allowing only one parent to be notified of a minor child's abortion would endanger family relationships. One parent keeping the secret from the other is more destructive to a family unit than the truth, says Schweitz.

"I cringe to think about what this is going to do to some families," she told the committee.

But proponents, including a woman who identified herself to the committee as "Jane Doe," says legal and personal considerations should be weighted more toward the pregnant minor.

"Doe," who as a pregnant 14-year-old
The Minnesota law does allow a minor to get approval for an abortion from the courts if she can show she is either mature enough to make the decision or if her best interests are served by not telling her parents.

Shoot and run

Leaving the scene of an automobile accident without stopping is a crime in itself. But there's currently no penalty for leaving the scene of a shooting accident.

A bill approved March 27 by the Judiciary Committee's Criminal Justice Division would set up penalties for leaving the scene of a shooting accident, ranging from a gross misdemeanor to a felony.

The measure (HF922) would require those who discharge a firearm or who witness a shooting accident, and who have reason to believe an injury has occurred, to investigate the person's injury and offer assistance if needed.

A shooting incident last fall where the suspects left the scene prompted Rep. Don Ostrom (DFL-St. Peter) to sponsor the bill, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee for further review.

Jennifer Enter of rural Nicollet described how she was accidentally shot on her family's farm by hunters who fled the scene. The high school senior appeared before the Judiciary Committee's Criminal Justice Division March 27 to support a bill that would impose penalties for fleeing the scene of a shooting accident.

The maximum penalty for failing to investigate the extent of injuries would be two years in prison and a $4,000 fine for the person who discharged the firearm, and up to a year in jail and a $3,000 fine for a witness to a shooting accident.

Some committee members, however, thought the gross misdemeanor penalty for witnesses was too stringent.

Rep. David Bishop (IR-Rochester) unsuccessfully attempted to reduce the penalty for witnesses to a misdemeanor, which carries a lesser sentence.

Pranksters beware

Pranksters wouldn't have the last laugh if a bill recently approved in the Judiciary Committee's Criminal Justice Division becomes law.

The measure (HF174) sponsored by Rep. Dennis Ozment (IR-Rosemount) would expand the disorderly conduct law to include offensive, obscene, or abusive conduct. Generally, the law now only applies to offensive, obscene, or abusive language.

The bill was prompted by a 1989 incident in which a junior high school girl's pants were pulled down by some male classmates.

Their prank wasn't covered by the current definition of disorderly conduct, but would be under Ozment's proposal.

Although there is a law prohibiting the removal of clothing when it's done with sexual or aggressive intent, Ozment says the penalty for that crime is too harsh for the boys' behavior.

He says his bill would consider less serious acts of misconduct as disorderly and charge them as misdemeanors, which carry a lesser penalty.

HF174 was referred to the full Judiciary Committee for further review.

Juvenile jails

Minnesota has one year left to comply with a 1974 federal law mandating that juvenile offenders be held in facilities separate from the adult offender population while awaiting court disposition of their cases. The state faces a loss of nearly $800,000 in federal funds yearly if that goal isn't met.

Rural access to courts

Minnesota counties that are losing people also are losing judges, leading to concern among lawmakers that residents of outstate Minnesota don't have adequate access to the state court system.

A bill (HF200) approved by a House subcommittee March 22 would require the Minnesota Supreme Court to consider how eliminating a judicial position would affect a community's access to a judge before a decision on the position is made.

Two attorneys practicing in the Eighth Judicial District, where four of thirteen counties are without a resident judge, urged a House panel to approve the measure.

Attorney Walt Libby told the Judiciary Committee's Civil Law Subcommittee that justice isn't served when law enforcement officers and people involved in lawsuits have to travel too far to appear before a judge. The problem is particularly evident when a judge is needed to issue a time-sensitive order such as a search warrant or order for protection.

The bill, authored by Rep. Doug Peterson (DFL-Madison), stipulates that the court must weigh access against administrative needs when a district judicial position is under review. It neither requires the court to maintain judgeships based solely on access, nor restore positions in the 10 counties statewide that currently don't have a resident judge.

"This bill, we feel, would help deal with that problem to where access really was a co-equal factor with judicial administration," says Libby.

Minnesota Supreme Court Chief Justice Sandy Keith told members that he didn't oppose the bill, adding that the court already carefully considers the question of access when reviewing judgeships.

HF200 now moves to the full Judiciary Committee for consideration.

Crime victims' notification

A bill requiring crime victims be told when the offender who harmed them escapes from jail, prison, or a mental facility, cleared another hurdle in the House March 25.

The measure (HF716) passed the Judiciary Committee March 25 and was referred to the House floor.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Art Seberg (IR-Eagan), would require that crime victims be told within six hours of the time their offender escapes — provided the victim asked to be notified.

Currently, authorities are required to notify the victim only when an offender is released from a jail, prison, or mental facility.

The bill would also require prosecutors to notify victims within seven days of the disposition of the case in those instances where the victim is identifiable, if the victim requests notification.

In addition, it would waive the court costs for indigent people seeking temporary restraining orders, which are often used to protect the victims of domestic abuse.

Registering sex offenders

A bill proponents say could help find missing children and keep track of some sex offenders after they are released from prison was approved March 27 by the Judiciary Committee's Data Privacy Subcommittee.

HF461, sponsored by Rep. Kathleen Vellenga (DFL-St. Paul) would mandate that certain convicted kidnappers and sex offenders whose crimes were against minors furnish authorities with their address.

The decision to obtain the convicted offender's address would rest with the judge at the time of sentencing. If the court finds that "there is a significant risk that the offender may re-offend," the convicted offender must provide the probation officer with a current address for 10 years after release from prison.

Failure to comply would be a misdemeanor.

Some questioned whether the decision of mandatory notification should be decided before prison time is served, saying such a finding, "rejects the possibility of rehabilitation."

But proponents say keeping track of offenders would serve as both a deterrent and would help law enforcement officials in cases where an offender commits a similar crime.

Testimony by members of the Missing Children's Task Force told of repeat offenders, who are still at large, and who continue to prey on minors.

Their victims are sometimes "throw-away" children, what one witness calls the "invisible population" of kids on the street.

HF461 tries to identify these children and calls for a list of missing children to be circulated among law enforcement agencies. It also would create a quarterly bulletin listing missing children.

HF461 was referred to the full Judiciary Committee for further debate.

Transportation

Relieving congestion on Twin Cities highways rather than curtailing pollution or saving energy will likely be the impetus for building a new rapid transit system in the region, says a Metropolitan Council planning specialist.

Testifying March 26 before a House subcommittee, Napalio Diaz of the Metropolitan Council says, "We can't justify LRT [light rail transit] solely on the basis of pollution or energy issues."

Instead, he says it will be clogged highways which will likely prompt commuters to demand alternative modes of travel.

Diaz says more than a third of all major Twin Cities roadways will routinely be gridlocked within the next 20 years unless commuter patterns are significantly changed.

But Diaz backed away from an openarmed endorsement of light rail or other rapid transit systems. He says LRT, at best, should be part of a comprehensive regional transportation program.

"The Met Council does not subscribe to LRT as an end for itself," Diaz says, suggesting that light rail lines should be built only in specific corridors where ridership would offset its costs.

Peter Vanderpoel of the Minnesota Citizens League, a Twin Cities-based public interest and lobbying group, says it's doubtful LRT would ever lure enough people out of their cars to make it cost-effective.

He estimates LRT could draw about 200,000 riders a day by 2010. But that would be only a small share of the nearly 10 million individual passenger trips expected each day by that time, and Vanderpoel says only about 43,000 of those passengers would be taking the train solely because of LRT.
Television

Beheading Big Bird

Minnesota's national ranking for state support to public television would plummet into a last place tie with Delaware if Gov. Arne Carlson's proposal to discontinue state funding for public television is adopted.

Currently, state government contributes $2.1 million annually to six public television stations statewide, earning a 36th place national ranking in per capita funding for public television.

By joining tiny Delaware (where viewers receive programming from neighboring Maryland) in expending no money on public TV, Minnesota Public Television Association spokesman Bill Strusinski says, "We would truly be very unique."

Strusinski outlined the plight of public broadcasters to lawmakers March 27, addressing the Appropriations Committee's State Government Division.

Strusinski says the loss of state funding would also jeopardize broadcasters' access to matching federal and foundation grants. One-half of Minnesota's stations would fall below the threshold to qualify for grants from public TV's premier backer, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Minnesota viewers, who watch 300 million hours in public broadcasting yearly, could lose a variety of popular public affairs and educational programs if the proposed cuts are adopted, says Strusinski.

Even the popular children's program, "Sesame Street," could fall victim, he says.

Strusinski reminded lawmakers that public television ranked number one — above milk — in a recent Adweek poll that rated products and services that satisfy American consumers.

Even so, the committee made no recommendation on funding for public television.

The GMC's future

The controversial Greater Minnesota Corporation (GMC), the economic development agency begun in 1987, got off to a bad start, says the Legislative Auditor's Office.

But despite improvements in the GMC's operation in the past year, lawmakers still are looking at what to do with the organization. The International Trade and Technology Division of the Economic Development Committee is expected next week to consider at least seven bills that could eliminate or dramatically change the GMC.

Kathleen Vanderwall, a researcher with the legislative auditor, told lawmakers March 28 that the GMC early on suffered from a lack of focus and accountability. The quasi-public agency also was hurt by the "ethical shortcomings" and the inexperience of its former president, she says.

Although the agency's performance has improved, the legislative auditor suggests, among other recommendations, that the GMC's board be appointed by the governor and that the state develop an overall economic development policy.

Next week, lawmakers are expected to take up several bills:
• HF686 (Krueger-DFL), which abolishes the GMC and transfers its duties to a new legislative commission on economic development.
• HF727 (Krueger-DFL), which would transfer the GMC to the University of Minnesota.
• HF907 (Krueger-DFL), which would rename the GMC the Minnesota Technical Development Center and would make the agency give more attention to technology transfer and small manufacturers.
• HF930 (Krueger-DFL), which would create a separate division of science and technology in the governor's office.
• HF989 (Bishop-IR), which would change the GMC to the Minnesota Technology Development Corporation and adopt other recommendations made recently by Gov. Arne Carlson.
• HF1109 (Frerichs-IR), which would establish Advantage Minnesota Inc., a new corporation devoted to marketing economic development.

Sowing seeds

Some lawmakers want the state to get into the seed capital business by starting a fund to finance companies whose profit potential doesn't attract investments from traditional venture capitalists.

A measure (HF1088) authored by Rep. Gloria Segal (DFL-St. Louis Park) seeks to fill a so-called "funding gap" that hinders the growth of startup and expanding
Health Department budget cuts

While budget cuts of 4.8 percent in 1992 and 2 percent in 1993 may not sound that large, Department of Health officials say they will have a very real effect on programs that affect real people.

The proposed cuts will likely mean fewer dollars for state programs dealing with AIDS prevention and control, water safety testing, and health awareness, department officials told members of the Appropriations Committee's Human Resources Division March 25 and 26.

Among the proposals are reductions in funding for studies aimed to help reduce the state's infant mortality rate.

In addition, officials say that with the cuts in state funding, more pressure will be placed on the counties to fund some health-related programs.

Licensing audiologists

The consumer isn't being protected because there is inadequate regulation of the speech-language pathology and audiology industry, says Roberta Kreb of the Minnesota Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

She testified March 25 before the Governmental Operations Committee's Governmental Structures Division in favor of a bill (HF668) sponsored by Rep. Mary Jo McGuire (DFL-Falcon Heights) that would regulate and license speech-language pathologists and audiologists.

"The general public thinks we're licensed just like doctors and nurses, but we're not," says Kreb.

Currently, the two professions require only voluntary registration, and only the occupational titles are protected. But that hasn't stopped people from skirting the licensing requirement by calling themselves a communications disorder specialist, voice therapist, or aphasiologist, Kreb says.

Although these people do the same work as speech-language pathologists and audiologists, Kreb says they aren't necessarily qualified.

Currently, 39 states demand similar qualifications, including Iowa. Kreb says her organization was recently contacted by the Iowa Medical Association, which is suspending the license of someone practicing in the area of audiology.

"They wanted to warn us [that person] is moving to Minnesota, because we have no licensing requirements," says Kreb.

The potential harm to patients can be irreparable, says audiology Professor Robert Margolis of the University of Minnesota. An inaccurate diagnosis can, among other things, halt speech development in children, he says.

The committee did not act on HF668.

Health licensing fee increase?

Many of the state's health boards told legislators March 27 they plan to raise licensing and renewal fees in order to help cover rising costs.

Doctors, nurses, psychologists, dentists, and pharmacists are among those who will likely be affected.

Yearly fees range now from $20 for a dental assistant to $225 for a podiatrist. Most fees are expected to increase by between $5 and $30.

Most of the 15 boards are also requesting money from the Legislature for one or two new staff members. The influx of complaints filed for health-related services during the last few years has caused the need for more staff, a number of board officials say.

Karen Ramsey of the Board of Dentistry says the rise in complaints is a national trend, possibly due to increased consumer awareness.

Officials from the various boards appeared March 27 before the Appropriations Committee's Human Resources Division.

Limiting background checks

A Minnesota law that can disqualify people who have had a mental illness from working in human services facilities is against federal law and needs to be changed, says Rep. Gloria Segal (DFL-St. Louis Park).

Segal is authoring a bill (HF488) that would bar mental health evaluations from being included in background checks carried out before people are hired to work in licensed human service facilities.

The measure was approved March 28 by the Health and Human Services Committee and sent to the House floor.

Background checks would continue to contain criminal convictions and any substantiated reports of abuse or neglect of adults, or the maltreatment of minors.

Minnesota law requires background checks on all employees in licensed human service facilities. These background checks can reveal past mental illness that could disqualify a person for employment even if they have never been reported for abuse or neglect, says Segal.

Rep. Lee Greenfield (DFL-Mpls) says that just asking for mental health information invites discrimination lawsuits under federal law. Any determination must be made from documented actions, he says, not a condition or evaluation.

But some representatives questioned whether prohibiting this information could possibly pose a threat to people at human service institutions.

Rep. Doug Swenson (IR-Minneapolis) wants to know if the state could comply with federal law without totally eliminating the use of mental health information in background screening.

Minnesota and Massachusetts

Is Minnesota following the failed example of Massachusetts by proposing access to health care for all Minnesotans? Opponents of the proposed Minnesotans' Health Plan told the Health and Human Services Committee March 26 that the plan must be scaled down to avoid a similar disaster.

Rep. Gil Gutknecht (IR-Minneapolis) says that the Minnesotans' Health Plan is on the "same wavelength" as the Massachusetts system which helped devastate that state's economy while health care costs continued to soar.

Opponents are pushing an alternative measure authored by Rep. Dave Gruenes (IR-St. Paul) that says he would cut the estimated cost of providing basic health care to uninsured Minnesotans from $120 million over the next two years to between $50 million and $65 million.

Gruenes says he wants to target those who have been uninsured for more than one year and get more employers to chip in to finance the program.

Supporters of the bill advocated by Rep. Paul Ogren (DFL-Aitkin), however, say critics just haven't done their homework. The Massachusetts system was entirely employer-based, they say, and did not include medical practices reform or insurance reform as the Minnesota plan does.

"We are not imposing anything on employers," says Ogren. "We had the example of Massachusetts before us in the Health Care Access Commission before any of this work was done. This is not based on Massachusetts, nor is it similar to it."

Ogren authors HF2, which outlines what benefits Minnesotans would receive under the plan. Along with HF7, the statewide data collection and research initiative, HF2 was approved by the Health and Human Services Committee and sent to the Appropriations Committee. HF6, which focuses on rural health care issues, was also approved and sent to the Governmental Operations Committee. The proposed Minnesotans' Health Plan is split into five separate bills.

Government

Governor's bonding proposal

Gov. Arne Carlson has proposed that state spending for 23 capital improvement projects authorized by the 1990 Legislature — totaling $46.4 million — be delayed to prevent the state from sliding further into debt.

But the governor has also asked the Legislature to approve an additional $133.5 million in new capital projects that he feels are necessary.

The governor's state bonding proposal drew a chilly reception March 25 as Finance Commissioner John Gunyou brought the package before the Appropriations Committee.

Among the initiatives put on hold was the state technical college system's top-ranked project: a $4.5 million appropriation for new classroom space at the Detroit Lakes Technical College. A spokesman for the college says some classes, as well as a child care center, are housed in a 50-year-old building originally constructed as a machine storage shed.

Rep. Loren Thompson (DFL-Waubun) charged that by denying the Detroit Lakes commitment, even temporarily, the administration sends the message that the technical college system doesn't even know its own priorities.

And the administration's tactics — putting last year's session laws on hold while forwarding a new agenda — drew cries of constitutional foul play from Rep. Bob Anderson (IR-Grand Forks). Anderson reminded Gunyou that the Legislature provides budget directives that the administration is expected to carry out, adding that the 1990 capital improvement plan was passed by overwhelming majorities in both the House and Senate.

The administration cited two reasons for delaying the project: The first was to keep the state's debt load to within 3 percent of the state's general fund. The second was to await the findings of the recently created Blue Ribbon Commission on Higher Education, says Gunyou. The commission is charged with studying possible mergers and consolidations within the state's four public systems of higher education.

The Detroit Lakes facility was among the larger projects to be delayed. But the governor also suggested delaying funding for the $2.5 million Giant's Ridge Shooting Sports Center, the $2.5 million Holmenkollen Ski Jump, the $1.2 million International Wolf Center in Ely, and the $50,000 Battle Point Historic Site.

The delay of the Battle Point site, which one legislator says will save the state the approximate cost of a hot tub, renews on a state promise to Native Americans of the Leech Lake Band, says Rep. Jim Rice (DFL-Duluth), adding that the tribe donated several miles of lake shore on Leech Lake for the historic site.

"I see this as a gratuitous insult, and whether anybody likes it or not, I'm going to recommend to the Leech Lake Band that they pull that [proposal] off the table," says Rice.

Included in the $133.5 million in new spending proposed by the governor are $45.1 million in maximum effort school loans for six districts and $50 million to finance the purchase of wetlands, as outlined in a measure sponsored this session by Rep. Willard Munger (DFL-Duluth).

The governor's capital budget recommendation will be considered by the Appropriations Committee's five divisions before being voted on by the full committee.

Children's commission

A bill to establish a legislative commission on children and families won approval from a fourth and final House committee March 28. The Health and Human Services Committee sent HF9 to the House floor for further review.

The measure would create a commission of eight senators and eight House members to examine children's issues and coordinate resources throughout the state.

The measure specifies that commission members come from the Appropriations, Education, Governmental Operations, Health and Human Services, and Judiciary committees because these committees play essential roles in developing children's policy.

Rep. Alice Johnson (DFL-Spring Lake Park), author of HF9, says the proposed commission would help bring the work done by various panels and task forces under one roof and eliminate duplication.

Education

Merging the college systems

Minnesota's higher education landscape could be considerably different in the near future if the state university, community college, and technical college systems are governed by a single unit as several key lawmakers have suggested.

The measure (SF1072), introduced March 27 by state Senate caucus leaders Roger Moe (DFL-Erskine) and Duane Benson (IR-Lanesboro) is by far the most extensive of several higher education consolidation proposals now surfacing at the state Legislature.

And it has, at least temporarily, delayed action on a House bill that called for a merger of the community college and state university systems.

Another bill that calls for the merger of the technical and community college systems has been drafted in the House, but has not been formally introduced. And the House bill calling for a merger of all three systems is expected to be introduced soon as well.

The authors of all three bills now before the Legislature say some streamlining of the state's higher education systems is long overdue. Each have said their measure would reduce duplication in program offerings and administration costs within the different institutions.

Recent cost estimates compiled by the state Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) and presented March 27 to the House Appropriations Committee's Education Division suggest some merger of the state college systems could save money.

The HECB says a merger of the community college and technical college systems could save about $5.5 million per year, and merging the state university and community college systems would result in about a $2.5 million annual savings.

The HECB did not calculate the costs and possible savings of a three-system merger.

Collegiate license plates

A bill creating state scholarships for top high school students that would be financed through the sale of commemorative license plates was unanimously approved March 27 by the Education Committee's Higher Education Division.

Rep. Gene Pelowski says his bill (HF 477) would provide full scholarships for students pursuing a variety of degrees at any of the seven state university system campuses, the University of Minnesota, or participating private institutions.

The commemorative license plates, bearing college insignias or mascots, would cost $100 over the regular price of the plates and contribute $500,000 or more each year for the renewable scholarships, says Pelowski. The award amount for students choosing private schools would be equal to the instruction costs at a comparable public institution.

A few participants in the first School-Age Child Care Day at the Capitol discovered that lobbying takes a lot of energy. About 750 school-age children came to the Capitol March 26.

The number of scholarships available to each college would be determined according to the number of license plates sold. Pelowski says individual schools would be expected to help promote sales of the specialty plates.

He says it's very important to provide students with academic incentives, adding that it's a common misconception that all top high school students automatically receive college scholarships.

Nine other states currently sell commemorative plates to help fund college scholarship programs.

Pelowski says he may amend the bill to include technical college students, and to limit the scholarships to students who don't receive other grants.

The bill now moves to the full Education Committee.

Teacher education

Two bills proposing more funding for teacher development and assessment programs were heard March 26 before the Education Committee's Education Finance Division.

If approved, the measures would pump more money into programs to aid beginning instructors and to develop regional teacher centers for improving teacher skills at all experience levels.

The first measure (HF597), sponsored by Rep. Katy Olson (DFL-Sherburn), would establish structured internships to give would-be teachers an opportunity "to prove themselves" before being licensed.

"Beginning teachers so often are left to either sink or swim," says Olson. Her bill would also establish assessment programs to gauge teachers' performance and skills.

The second measure (HF730), authored by Rep Alice Johnson (DFL-Mpls), would provide additional funding for programs and other community leaders to develop ways to improve classroom methods.

The programs would receive $300,000 in state funding every year under Johnson's bill.

The centers would also work with education department officials to evaluate teacher education programs, and would — according to division chair Rep. Ken Nelson (DFL-Mpls) — unite several existing and proposed professional development programs for teachers.

No action was taken on either of the bills, although Nelson says both likely will be incorporated into the division's omnibus education package.

Outcome-based education

The notion that just a few students deserve "A" grades while the majority receive "C" grades, and the struggling learners get "D's" or "F's" could soon disappear like yesterday's blackboard slates.

Outcome-based education (OBE) — where students are judged by what they accomplish, not how they stack up against others — is a centerpiece of education reform measures proposed by both IR Gov. Arne Carlson and House DFL leaders this session.

But several education specialists and many key lawmakers say students will ultimately be the winners with outcome-based education.

"This is not a fad," says Ceil Critchley, assistant commissioner for school management and support with the Department of Education.

During March 22 testimony before the Education Committee's Education Finance Division, Critchley explained that the department plans to phase in outcome-based education programs on a voluntary basis over the next 10 years.

Coupled with school-based site management, advocates say outcome-based education will provide more local control of schools, give teachers and parents a larger role in shaping education programs, and provide a more accurate assessment of how well students are learning.

Outcome-based schooling is based on the assumption that all students can learn. Learning goals, or outcomes, are established in consultation with parents and students. Students then work on the lesson plans until they reach those goals before moving to the next set of outcomes.

The concept is not without its critics, however. Several division members questioned Critchley and others on whether colleges would accept students who don't have traditional grade-point averages and whether most parents would actually get more actively involved with schools.

Division members also wondered whether OBE proposals would create a new bureaucracy within the department and whether schools that are slow to develop outcome-based education would miss out on sizable chunks of state funding.

"There's an awful lot of money here going into a program which isn't required," says Rep. Alice Johnson (DFL-Spring Lake Park).

But Critchley says OBE programs should be voluntary, allowing individual schools to develop their own teaching methods. She also says department officials are reluctant to call for statewide standards for OBE and other programs.

The division and the full Education Committee have not yet made final recommendations on either Gov. Carlson's proposal (HF462), carried by Rep. Dennis Ozment (IR-Rosemount), or the DFL leadership proposal (HF350), authored by Rep. Bob Meachern (DFL-Maple Lake).

School vending machines

Is the debate over vending machine control in schools one of nutrition, money, or both? A bill that would put some control of vending machines in the hands of the school food service produced a second day of vigorous debate in the Education Committee March 25.

Rep. Linda Scheid (DFL-Brooklyn Park), author of HF532, says that public schools should promote good nutrition by giving the school food service control over vending machines — at least during lunch hours.

Supporters of the bill say that most vending machines remain in use over the lunch period competing with the school lunch program. Kids eat junk food, they say, which takes money away from the lunch program and drives up the cost for those kids who do eat nutritionally sound meals.
But others say the real issue is local control, explaining that the vending machines are equipped with timers so they can be shut down over the lunch hour.

If school officials were really concerned about nutrition, say opponents, they could simply shut down vending machines.

Opponents suggest the real reason schools want to control vending machine operations is so they can subsidize school lunch programs. In addition, they say kids would continue to get junk food at surrounding stores, but none of those profits would go to school activities.

They say the bill flies in the face of reforms that aim to increase local control. "If this thing were law right now . . . it may be among the list of mandates that school districts would like to get rid of," says Rep. Steve Dille (IR-Dassel).

The Education Committee voted 16-12 to send the bill to its finance division for further discussion.

Banking

Worthless checks

Minnesotans write an estimated $1.8 million dollars in bad checks every month, but that could change under a bill proposed by Rep. Wally Sparby (DFL-Thief River Falls).

Sparby wants to allow Minnesota businesses to charge more for bad checks and make it a bit tougher to open a new checking account. Sparby's HF1038 was heard March 25 by the Banking Division of the Financial Institutions and Insurance Committee.

Sparby proposed the bill to help Minnesota businesses deal with check writing fraud. According to the Minnesota Retail Merchants Association, 28 percent of all checks returned for insufficient funds in Minnesota are considered fraudulent.

Under Sparby's bill, the maximum fee a business could charge for a bad check would rise from $15 to $20. And banks would be required to be more diligent in checking the identification of customers who open new checking accounts.

While many business groups support the measure, two banking groups spoke against it. They're concerned about a provision that would prohibit banks from assessing bad check fees against anyone but the person who wrote the checks. Currently, banks can charge businesses for bad checks they submit for payment.

Testimony on HF1038 is expected to resume next week.

Agriculture

Will milk cost more?

The price of a gallon of milk might jump half a cent if a bill approved by the Agriculture Committee becomes law.

At the same time, fees paid by dairy farmers for Agriculture Department inspections would drop, a move that could come as a relief to those farmers hurt by the lowest milk prices in 15 years.

But the lower fees would mean someone will have to make up the difference, and processors of fluid milk — as opposed to those who make cheese, powdered milk or other products — protest that they're the ones who will have to pick up an unfair chunk.

HF493, sponsored by Agriculture Committee Chair Rep. Stephen Wenzel (DFL-Little Falls), was approved by lawmakers March 25 and referred to the Appropriations Committee.

Saying he fears "the wholesale elimination" of the state's dairy industry, Wenzel explained that his bill would shift the burden of paying for Minnesota's $1.5 million annual inspection program away from farmers.

Currently, farmers pay about 65 percent of the program's cost; the remaining 35 percent comes from the state's general fund. Under Wenzel's bill, farmers' share of the inspection cost would drop to about a third. The general fund would pick up another third.

The balance would be paid from a new fee on fluid milk processors, who, beginning July 1, would have to pay a 5-cent per hundredweight fee for inspections. That translates to about a half-cent per gallon increase in how much consumers would pay for milk.

Wenzel's bill has support from the Minnesota Farmers Union and the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

But Wy Spano, representing the Dairies Federation of Minnesota, says the new fee on fluid milk processors would be unfair. "Fluid milk processors handle 13 percent of the milk in Minnesota," Spano argued, "... yet we're supposed to pay a third of the non-farm-based fees."

William Coleman, director of the Agriculture Department's dairy and livestock division, told the committee that the processor fee wouldn't apply to cheese and dry milk processors because many of those processors are cooperatives owned by farmers.

Elise Krueger (wearing Milk T-shirt) was one of several dairy farmers who sat in on an Agriculture Committee discussion March 25 on dairy inspection fees. The Kruegers operate a dairy farm about 50 miles south of Duluth.
'Minnesota pure' milk

Dairy farmers could join the growing market niche of all-natural foods under the controversial "Minnesota pure" bill proposed by Rep. Richard Krueger (DFL-independent). Farmers favor the voluntary participation program, others spoke against the measure.

The Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation is among those fearing that sticking a "Minnesota pure" label on a jug of milk could suggest that other Minnesota-produced milk is not good. The Farm Bureau also says the state Department of Agriculture would face increased costs because of the inspections it would have to conduct to determine if milk is of "Minnesota pure" quality.

The Farm Bureau also says the state Department of Agriculture would face increased costs because of the inspections it would have to conduct to determine if milk is of "Minnesota pure" quality.

The bill, already approved by the Environment and Natural Resources Committee, won't come up for a vote in the Agriculture Committee until after Easter, according to committee chair Rep. Stephen Wenzel (DFL-Little Falls).

Environment

Hunting, fishing changes

Deer hunters could get their deer plus one more if a bill approved by the Environment and Natural Resources Committee becomes law.

HF887, proposed by Rep. Leo Reding (DFL-Austin), was approved March 28, despite opposition from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Minnesota Deer Hunters' Association.

The bill would allow hunters to take one deer under an archery permit and one under a firearms permit.

Currently, hunters are limited to just one deer per year, although bow hunters can take a second deer under a bonus permit system in areas where the DNR has ruled the deer population is too high.

Reding told the Game and Fish Subcommittee on March 26 that states neighboring Minnesota already allow hunters to take two deer per season.

Frank Schneider of St. Paul objected to the bill.

"This thing's prejudiced," he said. "The only people who benefit from this are bow hunters." The bow hunting season falls before the firearms season.

Spiking tree 'spiking'

Paul Bunyan and a host of other real-life loggers will no doubt support a bill that was recently approved by a judiciary division and is now pending in the full Judiciary Committee.

The measure (HF647) would make it a gross misdemeanor for anyone to wedge a "hard" device such as an iron spike in timber which would cause damage to harvesting equipment. Furthermore, if someone is hurt as a result of such timber tampering, the offender could be charged with a felony.

Currently, state law does not cover such an action.

The bill sponsored by Rep. Loren Solberg (DFL-Bovey) is in response to the recent "spiking" of virgin timber in northern Minnesota for the purpose of stopping loggers from harvesting the timber.

Solberg told the committee that the majority of people — whether they are for or against harvesting virgin timber — are against tree spiking.

"Everyone has a right to protest certain actions . . . but I don't think we have a right in that protest to endanger other people," he says.

Howard Hedstrom, an owner of Hedstrom Lumber, Inc. near Grand Marais, told lawmakers that tree spiking is "forest terrorism." He added that "someone's warped sense of protectionism [for the environment] is not worth the value of human life."

The bill would also provide criminal penalties for intentionally interfering with or obstructing someone's work in an effort to prevent legal harvesting, processing, or transportation of timber.

In addition, the bill requires such violators to pay restitution if equipment is damaged as a result of the spiking.

'Wet bike' regulations

"Wet bike" enthusiasts will need to be at least 16 years old, always wear a life jacket, and ride only between 8 a.m. and sunset under a bill receiving final approval March 27 on a 109-22 vote in the House.

The measure (HF633) is now pending in the Senate Environment and Natural Resources Committee.

Children younger than 16 will still be able to operate the personal watercraft — commonly known as wet bikes or jet skis — but only if an adult rides with them. Sixteen- and 17-year-olds will be required to hold watercraft operator's licenses.

Chief author Rep. Tony Kinkel (DFL-Park Rapids) proposed the bill to deal with growing complaints about unsafe use of wet bikes on state rivers and lakes. A total of 6,145 personal watercraft were registered in the state last year, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

Preliminary floor debate on the bill March 25 lasted for more than an hour as lawmakers discussed the age at which youths should be allowed to use wet bikes unsupervised, and on how the proposed law would be enforced on lakes that share a border with other states.

Kinkel says he was mildly surprised by the extensive debate the measure generated on the House floor.

Three-year-old Madeline Orenstein kept a watchful eye on the Health and Human Services Committee March 28 as her father, Rep. Howard Orenstein, presented a bill concerning child care.

"Whenever you start talking about something that affects sports or recreation in this state, people get interested," says Kinkel.

Veterans Affairs

Status quo at Veterans Affairs

Old soldiers may just fade away, but their benefits don't. Federal money paid to Minnesota's military veterans is increasing every year, even as the state's veteran population is declining.

Last year, $600 million was distributed to the state’s 500,000-plus veterans, which includes two soldiers who served during the Spanish-American War in 1898.

While the money comes from federal sources, it’s the responsibility of the state-funded Minnesota Department of Veterans Affairs to administer the benefits.

And with the state budget crunch, the department may have to fulfill its increasing responsibilities with four fewer employees in the next biennium.

Veterans Affairs Commissioner Bernard Helter presented the department's budget March 26 to the Appropriations Committee's State Government Division, which sets budget levels for state agencies.

The proposed 1992-93 budget of $9.5 million is the same as the budget in the current biennium. But rising administrative costs, the aging legion of WWII vets that dominate the department's workload, and an expected influx of about 10,000 Persian Gulf veterans, will make it difficult for the department to carry out its duties, says Helter.

He says the zero-growth budget will make it even more difficult to identify homeless veterans so they can receive... their federal veterans' benefits. Helter says it's estimated that 40 percent of the homeless nationwide — and in Minnesota — are Vietnam War veterans.

The committee took no action on the budget proposal.

Decorating vets

Several House members want to decorate Minnesota veterans, and honoring certain Persian Gulf vets with commemorative ribbons has been offered as one way to credit the state's military.

HF615, sponsored by Rep. Steve Sviggum (IR-Kenyon), honors both Minnesota national guard members and reserve components called to active duty because of the Persian Gulf conflict. It won approval March 28 from the General Legislation, Veterans Affairs and Gaming Committee.

Add this to the proposed constitutional amendment asking to grant Gulf vets a bonus (HF224), a two-year tuition exemption at public colleges (HF426), and the bases are loaded for a group of people who have already gone to bat for Minnesota. Rep. Pat Beard (DFL-Cottage Grove) says they "are more than deserving of our state's support."

The estimated cost of the ribbons is about $25 apiece, says Sgt. Maj. Ted Schultz of the Department of Military Affairs. A Texas supplier has already designed a Gulf crisis ribbon in conjunction with Missouri state military officials, he says. Designing a unique Minnesota ribbon is also an option, but would mean a one- or two-year delay in their presentation to service personnel.

While National Guard members can place the state-issued ribbons on their uniforms, reserve members cannot. Federal law requires that only United States issued decorations be displayed on a reservist's uniform. But upon retirement, state ribbons or medals may be worn.

Schultz explained each ribbon has a prescribed place on the uniform, and that a "hierarchy" determines which takes precedence.

Although there have been eight state medals authorized for wear on the uniform, Schultz says this would be the first such award for a specific military conflict.

Fergus Falls vets’ home?

In his 1992-93 proposed budget, Gov. Arne Carlson asked the Legislature not to authorize any new veterans homes. But that's not stopping Rep. Bob Anderson (IR-Ottertail) from pushing for a 60-bed home in Fergus Falls.

Every year since 1980, Anderson has introduced legislation to secure a home "needed to serve the aging veterans in this region of the state," he says. The measure passed the House in 1980 and in 1989, but failed each time in the Senate.

The Veterans Affairs Division of the General Legislation, Veterans Affairs and Gaming Committee approved Anderson's bill (HF648) calling for the nursing home and referred it to the full committee.

The measure calls for the conversion of the existing state hospital site in Fergus Falls into a skilled nursing care facility "that wouldn't cost the state anything for about five years," says Anderson.

About 65 percent of the cost would be borne by the federal government, with the remaining 35 percent coming from "non-state sources," says Anderson.

But to secure federal funding, Anderson says the bill needs to be approved so the home can be placed at the bottom of the funding waiting list, which could mean a wait of "at least five years."

Gaming

Racing commission

A bill (HF307) that would pay racing commission members the same as members of other boards and commissions is heading for the House floor after passing the Taxes Committee March 26.

Racing commission members currently receive $35 per day while members of other boards and commissions receive $55 per day. If approved, the increase would be effective July 1 of this year.

The bill would also require a redistribution of the "breeders' fund" that is collected through the tax on pari-mutuel betting. Currently, 20 percent of the fund is earmarked for equine research and education.

The measure requires that at least half the fund be spent on equine research and education with the rest to be used for substance abuse programs for racetrack personnel, promotion of the racing, breeding and horse industries, and additional equine education.

The bill had also called for a reduction in the state's share of pari-mutuel winnings to 8 percent from 10 percent, but the committee eliminated that provision.

Helping compulsive gamblers

A bill calling for $1.5 million to aid in treating compulsive gamblers was heard March 28 by the General Legislation, Veterans Affairs and Gaming Committee, but members delayed making a decision until next week.

HF685, sponsored by Rep. Gloria Segal (DFL-St. Louis Park), would fund a number of priorities outlined by Steve Dentinger, chair of the state advisory council on compulsive gambling. These include developing the current 1-800-hotline to become a 24-hour service, public education programs, and continuing education instruction for mental health professionals and addiction counselors.

The bill also requires that the hotline number be prominently displayed at every location selling lawful gaming, pari-mutuel, or lottery tickets.

Dentinger says studies show 1.6 percent of Minnesota adults are compulsive gamblers, with an additional 9 percent having "significant gambling problems." For people between the ages of 16 and 18, more than 6 percent were identified as addicts, with an additional 19.9 percent having problems.

"We've made it very easy for people to gamble in this state," says Rep. Linda Scheid (DFL-Brooklyn Park). "We, in this committee, have created problems we don't like to admit. We are responsible. It's time to put our money where our mouth is. Let's not be hypocrites."

And the problems are growing. The number of Gamblers Anonymous groups statewide has increased from 16 to 40 since last June, says Dentinger.
Newcomers to Minnesota might face a political identity crisis. "Where are the Democrats? Where are the Republicans?" the newcomers might ask. They may be confused by billboards pushing "DFL" and "IR" candidates.

"What are these radical, third-party groups?" they might wonder. "Where are the two mainstream parties?"

Of course, as seasoned Minnesotans know, the Democratic-Farmer-Labor and the Independent-Republican parties are the two mainstream parties. But their names point to the strong third-party heritage in Minnesota.

"Through most of its history, Minnesota has shown symptoms of political schizophrenia," wrote scholar Donald F. Warner in a 1951 edition of Minnesota History. "On the one hand, it was the staid dowager, as reliably Republican as its down-East Yankee sisters; on the other, it had skittish moments during which it produced a brood of third parties or helped raise the radical offspring of its neighbors."

The political spectrum in Minnesota has included shades from the far right to the far left.

But many third parties these days don't have much political strength and usually draw just a handful of votes. The most recent third party candidate to run for the House, Henry Zamarron of the Socialist Workers Party, got only 42 votes in February in his bid for the District 32B seat vacated by Elton Redalen, the new commissioner of agriculture. Preston Mayor and IR candidate Gregory Davids won the election with 3,370 votes.

"A great deal of printers' ink has been spilled to tell the world that a third party movement is impossible of success in America — is something foreign to our soil," wrote former Gov. Floyd B. Olson in 1935. "It is certain that much of this is sheer propaganda designed to discourage formation of a political party which will be representative of the aspirations of the masses."

In many foreign countries, third party movements are vibrant. Even Canada, with its Liberal, Conservative, and New Democratic parties, is able to boast of a strong third party presence.

Except for the rise of the Socialist Party before World War I, America has generally seemed disinterested in third parties.

But unlike most other states, Minnesota's third-party movement has seen major success. Olson knew that firsthand. In 1930, he won election as the state's first Farmer-Labor Party governor. The Legislature also featured many Farmer-Labor lawmakers, but because representatives and senators by law had to run on nonpartisan tickets, they weren't officially identified as such.

After Olson's untimely death in 1936 and the eventual deterioration of the Farmer-Labor movement, the party after World War II merged with the Democrats to form what is today the DFL.

Scholars have pointed to Minnesota's strong ethnic heritage as one reason that radical and liberal third parties, many rooted on the farms or dug into the iron ore mines, have had some success. Finnish miners from northern Minnesota, for example, helped shore up the Socialist and Communist movements.

While third parties might seem like a vestige of World War I and the Depression, every era seems to bring out a call for a new movement.

In 1924, the first time Olson ran for governor (and lost) as a member of the Farmer-Labor Party, he was up against candidates from the Republican, Democratic, Socialist Industrial, and Independent Progressive parties. (Reflecting the Prohibition Era, voters also had a chance to vote for a U.S. Senate candidate from the Beer-Wine-Independent Party.)

In 1977, St. Paul labor leaders, feeling that "labor" had disappeared from the DFL, proposed creation of a new Labor Party. The effort, however, never caught on.

But plenty of third parties are still active today.

The last general election in November featured candidates not only from the mainstream DFL and IR parties, but also the Socialist Workers, Grassroots, EarthRIGHT, Independent, Pro-Choice Independent, and the Independent Moderate parties.

Rep. Greg Davids (IR-Preston) says filling former representative Elton Redalen's old shoes may be a big job, but adds that he's got just the feet to do it.

Size 12 to be exact. People notice when Davids, a former wrestler and football player, enters the room.

But on a more serious note, Davids says he knows the district in southeastern Minnesota as well as anyone. He grew up there, served for four years as the Fillmore County Independent-Republican Party chairman, was a member of the Preston City Council, and served as mayor of the city from 1987 to Feb. 13 of this year.

Davids had thoughts about running for office before, but says Redalen and Sen. Duane Benson (IR-Lanesboro) were doing such a good job that the best thing to do was wait.

When Gov. Arne Carlson appointed Redalen as commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, Davids was the first of eight people to join the race.

"Before I'd ask for somebody's support, I'd ask if they were running, too," says Davids.

The general election came down to three people, and Davids won with 63.1 percent of the vote.

Davids says coming into session late was like grabbing a train ride with the train moving. And instead of "getting his feet wet," Davids says he jumped in head first. Shortly after being sworn in, he introduced his first bill.

"I don't waste any time," he says. But he'll miss his old job as mayor, he says, and some of the characteristics that went with it. His new job will require persuading more than just two members on the city council to think his way, he says.

Davids' district is primarily agricultural and includes no towns larger than 2,500. He lives in Preston, which has about 1,500 people, and owns an insurance company in Harmony, a town of almost 1,100. Though agriculture is the major issue in his area, he also wants to help small-town businesses.

"I want to do anything I can do to help small business in rural Minnesota because I don't want to see these small towns dry up," says Davids. "There are too many vacant buildings on main street. And that's a major concern of mine — to get those buildings filled up."

Like many legislators, Davids says he's also concerned about educational issues, workers' compensation reform, and health insurance reform.

But unlike many, Davids' diverse background gives him the advantage of viewing those issues from a variety of perspectives.

In addition to his job as an insurance agent and his service as mayor and city councilman, Davids has taught high school government and coached numerous high school sports for both boys and girls.

Although many representatives truly love being members of the House, Davids seems to especially relish his seat.

"There should be a law against having this much fun," he says.

Do you know?

Blame it on those incompetent government clerks.

Stearns County was supposed to have been named after Isaac Ingall Stevens, but a clerk mistook Stearns for Stevens, as in Charles Thomas Stevens. When the error was finally detected, Stearns was deemed worthy of the honor since he had established a respectable political reputation in the county.

Originally from Massachusetts, Stearns settled in St. Cloud in 1855, where he ran a hotel for 14 years. Two years earlier, the land on which the city now rests was purchased by John Wilson for $250. A great admirer of Napoleon, Wilson insisted the site be named St. Cloud, after the city the French ruler built for Empress Josephine.

Stevens was not to be forgotten, however. The former governor of Washington Territory, congressional delegate, and major-general would later have Stevens County established in his honor.

It's a fact!

There have been 66 female legislators since 1922, when women were first allowed to run for office. Of that number, well over half have been elected since 1977.

But one of the first female legislators, Mabeth Hurd Paige, still holds the title for the longest tenure as a female legislator. Rebuffed by the Republican Party in 1922, she ran as an independent and went on to serve Hennepin County for 10 terms in the Minnesota House.

She chaired the Welfare Committee and helped pass a law that outlawed street selling by minors.

But Paige may soon have to share her title. When Rep. Phyllis Kahn (DFL-Mpls) completes this legislative term, she will tie Paige's record.

Rep. Mabeth Hurd Paige (left) and the only "page girl," Gladys Joe Brown. Said Rep. Paige: "I had hoped, when I entered the legislature in 1923, that by 1943 no less than ten per cent of the legislators would be women — yet I still am the only one." — St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press (Photo courtesy of the Minnesota Historical Society)

Committee deadlines

If you're tracking important legislation and it has yet to have had a hearing, you might have to wait until next year before the measure is considered.

The first committee deadline is April 12, which is less than two weeks away. If a bill hasn't been approved by then in one House or Senate policy committee, chances are it won't be considered this session.

Here's how the deadline system works:

The first deadline (April 12) bars bills from being heard unless they have been approved in one policy committee in either the House or Senate. The second deadline, which this year is April 24, prevents bills from being heard in one body unless it has been approved by a policy committee in the other.

Because there are literally thousands of bills introduced each year, the deadlines help the Legislature focus on just a few of the proposals before them.

There are always exceptions to the rules, however. The authors of bills that have missed a deadline can plead their case with the Rules and Legislative Administration Committee to get a reprieve.

These deadlines generally don't apply to tax and appropriations bills, which aren't fashioned until late in the session.
