Legislature bloodies Minneapolis

St 5/13/01

Mugging Minneapolis, long a popular legislative sport, seems to have scaled new heights. It's open season on the state's largest city because, well, because it's Minneapolis and the people there are, how can we say it? Different. They're not real Minnesotans, if you catch our drift.

This brand of enmity is not unusual. Atlanta isn't popular in Georgia's legislature, nor is Seattle in Washington's. Cities tend to have special needs and expensive appetites that rural and suburban legislators do not appreciate.

In Minnesota, partisanship plays an additional role. Not since the 1980s has Minneapolis had a Republican in its delegation, making it easy, even festive, for the GOP-controlled House to steamroll the city at every turn. St. Paul, at least, has a Republican mayor to shield it from mischief.

The House's most outrageous move has been to establish special taxing districts around the Hiawatha light-rail stations. Only stations in Minneapolis are targeted, not those in Bloomington or at the airport. This is a transparent attempt to discourage new development and kill the baby in the cradle. A few vindictive House members have made it their aim in life to ensure failure of the nascent LRT line. (They did not, by the way, propose special taxes along expensive new freeways in Carver and Anoka counties.)

Among other shenanigans: Forcing a 10 percent cut in bus service; opening to all traffic the car pool/transit lanes of Interstate Hwy. 394 in violation of agreements; delaying the rebuilding of the Crosstown bottleneck, thus renewing the chance that nearby homes will be taken; preventing the city from redeveloping its Upper Riverfront for parks and housing, and killing the annual $750,000 state supplement to help the city repay debt for taking ownership of Target Center and saving the Timberwolves.

Minneapolis seems often to get stuck with the bill for projects that have statewide benefits. It alone had to finance the Metrodome and the state's major Convention Center, for example, while St. Paul got significant state help to build Xcel Energy Center and the Science Museum of Minnesota.

If all this sounds petty, it is. The House has a tradition of small-minded politics from both parties. Old-timers describe this latest episode as revenge for the days when arrogant DFLers routinely rewarded Minneapolis' school and municipal aid formulas.

We suspect there's more to it. Suburbs were once populated by those who had moved out from the city with an inkling of appreciation for urban problems and possibilities. New residents of, say, Brooklyn Park could still take pride in the civic attributes downtown. When traveling, they might even identify themselves as coming from Minneapolis.

No more. Suburbs are now home to people who've moved in from rural areas or from out of state. Many have little interest in the potential of the urban core. As long as taxes go down, freeways are clear and the back yard is mowed, life is pretty good. These attitudes, while not universal, have helped to embolden a breed of libertarian politician hostile to communitywide investments.

Many of these politicians see transit, for example, not as traffic relief but as welfare for people who, if they were worth anything, would have cars.

It's hard not to interpret all this as a region pulling apart just as a new, more competitive economy requires a pulling together. There's no room in this endeavor for politics as a blood sport.

Senators Kleis, Knutson, Neuville and Belanger introduced--

Enacting a Redistricting Plan

Peter S. Wattson
Senate Counsel

1. Introduction

This paper reviews the procedures states have used to enact legislative and congressional redistricting plans. A major question considered is whether to write into the law a metes and bounds description of the districts or instead list in the law the census tracts and blocks in each portion of a city or town that is split. A third possibility considered is to enact maps instead of either a legal description or a list of census units.

2. What Other States Have Done

a. Enacting Plans

Most states that have enacted plans show evidence of technical problems, in that they have had to amend their laws once, twice, or three times to make various corrections. The states that have avoided amending their redistricting laws are those that never enacted them—states where the plan was drawn by a commission or court and never appeared in the statutes. Eleven states¹ are using legislative plans drawn by a commission. In these states, when the commission has agreed upon a plan, it files the plan, in the form of maps and a table of census units in each district, with the secretary of state or other chief election officer, who proceeds to implement it. Twelve states² are using plans drawn by a court. When a court draws a plan it issues an order adopting the plan, consisting of maps and a table of census units, and orders the chief election officer to implement it. Courts frequently must amend their orders, but those amendments don't appear in the statutes.

One procedural step required of the Pennsylvania commission, and followed by the Minnesota and California state courts, is to issue a preliminary plan and allow interested parties to comment on it. The Pennsylvania Constitution requires a comment period of at least 30 days before the plan becomes final.³

Arkansas, Iowa, and West Virginia enacted congressional plans based on whole counties.⁴ Their plans take less than a page of statutory language. Kansas used whole counties except one, which was split only down to the town level.⁵ That plan likewise takes only a page. Ten states⁶ used whole precincts, listing whole counties, whole cities and towns, and the precincts in cities that were split. In order to be able to use whole precincts, some of those states⁷ allowed their local governments to redraw precinct boundaries before drawing legislative and congressional boundaries.

Seventeen⁸ of the legislatures that enacted legislative or congressional plans for the 1990s did so by listing the census units in each district, rather than by drawing a metes and bounds description. Extreme examples of this are Texas and Utah, which list for each district only the county, census tract, and block numbers, without showing the city, town, or precinct name--just pages and pages of block numbers.⁹ Virginia avoided the problem of describing split cities and towns by describing them in the law only as "part" and filing with the Clerk of the Senate (for senate districts) and the Clerk of the House (for house districts) a statistical report showing the blocks assigned to each district.¹⁰ Oklahoma enacted a house plan listing the census tracts and blocks in each district, but also instructed the state Department of Transportation to publish maps and a metes and bounds description of the districts and provide them to the State Election Board.¹¹

Finally, 13 state legislatures¹² enacted plans by listing the whole counties, cities, and towns in a district and drawing a metes and bounds description of the line splitting a city or town.

b. Making Technical Corrections

States that enacted redistricting plans often had to correct them with subsequent statutory amendments. But they also enacted a variety of statutory procedures to allow administrative corrections of technical problems. For example, several states have language in their statutes that assigns duplicate or omitted territory to the smallest contiguous district. California, in 1982, specifically authorized the Secretary of State to “undertake necessary measures to insure compliance with” the assignment of duplicate or omitted territory.¹³

Indiana addresses the problem of “islands” by saying that any part of the state that is entirely surrounded by a district is incorporated into the district that surrounds it.¹⁴

New York and Mississippi specifically authorize their secretary of state (or equivalent chief election officer) to correct technical errors that go beyond duplicate, omitted, or noncontiguous territory. They include:

. . . erroneous nomenclature; lack of adequate maps or descriptions of political subdivisions, wards, or other divisions thereof, or of their boundary line; street closings, changes in names of streets, or other changes of public places; alteration of the boundary or courses of waters or waterways, filling in or lands under water; accretion or other changes in shorelines; or alteration of courses, rights of way, or lines of public utilities or other conditions¹⁵

New York grants this authority to make corrections “at the request of any person aggrieved thereby, or any candidate affected thereby.”¹⁶ Mississippi limits it to occasions where there is a “request of the standing joint legislative committee on reapportionment.”¹⁷

California, in 1982, authorized maps that had been prepared by the Legislature or a legislative committee in connection with the enactment of a plan to be deposited with the Secretary of State in order to illustrate the boundary lines set forth in the law, and authorized the Secretary of State and county clerks to use the maps to assist them in interpreting the law and conducting elections.¹⁸ In 1983, the Legislature and Secretary of State used this authority to make sufficient corrections to the congressional redistricting plan to save it from constitutional attack.¹⁹

Maine gives its secretary of state broad authority to “resolve ambiguities concerning the location of election district lines consistent with the intent of these provisions.”²⁰

New York further directs that the statutes be revised in accordance with the corrections made by the State Board of Elections.²¹

3. The Minnesota Solution

Based on this review, I have recommended a number of steps to speed the process of enacting a redistricting plan, reduce the number of technical errors in it, and provide a procedure for correcting those that do arise, without the need for court action.

I believe that the most efficient way to publish the precise content of a redistricting plan is still a legal description of the counties, cities, and towns in each district and any lines that split a city or town. That description can be amended faster than new maps and tables can be produced, copied faster than maps and tables can be copied, applied to a wide variety of maps prepared by commercial vendors and political subdivisions, and permanently recorded with more certainty than a compact electronic file and bulky maps and tables. The process of preparing the legal description takes more time, but it also tends to uncover errors in the plan that are not otherwise noticed when reviewing maps and tables.

It is important to get the major outlines of a plan set early in the process. The best way to do that is to focus on the maps, for they can put the whole state into perspective and permit the members to deal with those larger problems first. Only when the major features of the plan are set is it appropriate to work on polishing the details. And those details, down to the location of the lines that split cities and towns, can't always be worked out in the short time between April 1 and adjournment of the legislative session in the year ending in one. If there is not time to prepare those legal descriptions and properly review them before adjournment, it may be better to delay their drafting until the interim between sessions.

Rather than attempting to enact a hastily-drafted legal description, and rather than enacting a list of census tracts and blocks that no one comprehends, I think it would be better to enact the plan by reference to whatever published maps and tables the members have relied upon in making their decisions to approve it. Those maps and tables could then be deposited with the Secretary of State and used as the basis for whatever additional materials would be needed to inform the county auditors and city clerks of the precise boundaries of each district. The Revisor of Statutes could prepare the legal description for distribution as soon as it is done and for publication in Minnesota Statutes. Any additional refinements found necessary could be presented in bill form to the next Legislature.

I assume that there will be at least one lawsuit in state court relating to redistricting after the 2000 census and that the Secretary of State will be a nominal defendant. Any disputes over technical corrections could be resolved by the court as part of that lawsuit, but corrections that were not controversial could be made administratively, without the need for a court order.

Minn. Stat. § 2.91 implements these suggestions. It provides for filing a legislative or congressional redistricting plan with the Secretary of State and disseminating it to local election officials. It also gives the Secretary of State authority to make administrative corrections to the plan.

A bill for an act relating to elections; adopting a legislative redistricting plan for use in 2002 and thereafter; repealing Minnesota Statutes 2000, sections 2.043 to 2.703.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA:

Section 1. [PLAN ADOPTED.]

The legislative redistricting plan H, on file with the geographic information systems office of the legislative coordinating commission and published on its Web site on, 2001, at m., is adopted as the legislative redistricting plan for this state. Each senate district is composed of the two house districts, A and B, of the same number. In accordance with Minnesota Statutes, section 2.91, the revisor of statutes shall code a metes and bounds description of the districts in Minnesota Statutes.

Sec. 2. [REPEALER.]

Minnesota Statutes 2000, sections 2.043; 2.053; 2.063; 2.073; (etc.) are repealed.

Sec. 3. [EFFECTIVE DATE.]

This act is effective for the state primary election in 2002 and thereafter.

Minnesota Statutes 2000

2.91 REDISTRICTING PLANS.

Subdivision 1. Distribution. Upon enactment of a redistricting plan for the legislature or for Congress, the legislative coordinating commission shall deposit the plan with the secretary of state. The secretary of state shall provide copies of the relevant portions of the redistricting plan to each county auditor, who shall provide a copy of the relevant portions of the plan to each municipal clerk within the county. The secretary of state, with the cooperation of the commissioner of administration, shall make copies of the plan file, maps, and tables available to the public for the cost of publication. The revisor of statutes shall code a metes and bounds description of the districts in Minnesota Statutes.

Subd. 2. Corrections. The legislature intends that a redistricting plan encompass all the territory of this state, that no territory be omitted or duplicated, that all districts consist of convenient contiguous territory substantially equal in population, and that political subdivisions not be divided more than necessary to meet constitutional requirements. Therefore, in implementing a redistricting plan for the legislature or for Congress, the secretary of state, after notifying the legislative coordinating commission and the revisor of statutes, shall order the following corrections:

(a) If a territory in this state is not named in the redistricting plan but lies within the boundaries of a district, it is a part of the district within which it lies.

(b) If a territory in this state is not named in the redistricting plan but lies between the boundaries of two or more districts, it is a part of the contiguous district having the smallest population.

(c) If a territory in this state is assigned in the redistricting plan to two or more districts, it is part of the district having the smallest population.

(d) If a territory in this state is assigned to a district that consists of other territory containing a majority of the population of the district but with which it is not contiguous, the territory is a part of the contiguous district having the smallest population.

(e) If the description of a district boundary line that divides a political subdivision is ambiguous because a highway, street, railroad track, power transmission line, river, creek, or other physical feature or census block boundary that forms part of the district boundary is omitted or is not properly named or has been changed, or because a compass direction for the boundary line is wrong, the secretary of state shall add or correct the name or compass direction and resolve the ambiguity in favor of creating districts of convenient, contiguous territory of substantially equal population that do not divide political subdivisions more than is necessary to meet constitutional requirements.

Subd. 3. Notice of corrections. The secretary of state shall provide a copy of each correction order to each affected county auditor, municipal clerk, and candidate.

Subd. 4. Recommendations to legislature. The secretary of state and the revisor of statutes shall recommend to the legislature any additional technical corrections to the redistricting plan they deem necessary or desirable.

5 BE IT RESOLVED, by the Legislature of the State of

6 Minnesota that a plan for redistricting seats in the Legislature

7 or the United States House of Representatives must adhere to the

8 following principles:

9 (1) [NUMBER OF DISTRICTS.] (a) The Senate must be composed

10 of 67 members. The House of Representatives must be composed of 11 134 members. Each district is entitled to elect a single member.

12 (b) A plan for congressional districts must have eight

13 districts, each entitled to elect a single member.

14 (2) [NESTING.] A Representative district may not be divided

15 in the formation of a Senate district.

16 (3) [EQUAL POPULATION.] (a) Legislative districts must be

17 substantially equal in population. The population of a

18 legislative district must not deviate from the ideal by more

19 than two percent, plus or minus.

20 (b) Congressional districts must be as nearly equal in 21 population as practicable.

22 (4) [CONTIGUITY; COMPACTNESS.] The districts must be

23 composed of convenient contiguous territory. To the extent

24 consistent with the other principles in this resolution,

1 districts should be compact. Contiguity by water is sufficient
2 if the water is not a serious obstacle to travel within the 3 district.

4 (5) [NUMBERING.] (a) The legislative districts must be
5 numbered in a regular series, beginning with House district 1A
6 in the northwest corner of the state and proceeding across the 7 state from west to east, north to south, but bypassing the 8 seven-county metropolitan area until the southeast corner has 9 been reached; then to the seven-county metropolitan area outside
10 the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul; then in Minneapolis and 11 St. Paul.

12 (b) The congressional district numbers must begin with 13 district one in the southeast corner of the state and end with 14 district eight in the northeast corner of the state.

15 (6) [MINORITY REPRESENTATION.] The districts must not 16 dilute the voting strength of racial or language minority
17 populations. Where a concentration of a racial or language
18 minority makes it possible, and where it can be done in 19 compliance with the other principles in this resolution, the 20 districts must increase the probability that members of the 21 minority will be elected.

22 (7) [PRESERVING POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS.] A county, city, or 23 town must not be divided into more than one district except as 24 necessary to meet equal population requirements or to form
25 districts that are composed of convenient contiguous territory.

26 (8) [COMMUNITIES OF INTEREST.] The districts should attempt 27 to preserve communities of interest where that can be done in 28 compliance with the preceding principles. For purposes of this 29 principle, "communities of interest" include, but are not
30 limited to, political subdivisions, neighborhoods, or other
31 geographic areas where there are clearly recognizable 32 similarities of social, political, cultural, ethnic, or economic 33 interests.

34 (9) [POLITICAL COMPETITIVENESS.] The districts should be
35 politically competitive, where that can be done in compliance
36 with the preceding principles. The districts must not be

1 created to unduly favor any political party.

2 (10) [INCUMBENTS.] The districts must not be drawn for the
3 purpose of protecting or defeating an incumbent.

4 (11) [DATA TO BE USED.] The geographic areas and population
5 counts used in maps, tables, and legal descriptions of the 6 districts must be those used by the Geographic Information
7 Systems Office of the Legislative Coordinating Commission. The 8 population counts will be the block population counts provided
9 under Public Law Number 94-171, subject to correction of any 10 errors acknowledged by the United States Census Bureau or by the 11 state demographer after consultation with the director of 12 geographic information systems.

13 (12) [DATA READY; PLANS POSTED.] The director of Geographic 14 Information Systems shall notify the President of the Senate and 15 the Speaker of the House of Representatives when the necessary
16 census data has been received from the United States Census
17 Bureau, loaded into the Legislature's computerized redistricting
18 system, and verified as ready for use in redistricting. A 19 redistricting plan must not be considered for adoption by the 20 Senate or House of Representatives until:

21 (a) the notice has been given;

22 (b) a block equivalency file showing the district to which 23 each census block has been assigned, in a form prescribed by the 24 director of Geographic Information Systems, has been filed with 25 the director; and

26 (c) a copy of the plan has been posted on the Web site of 27 the Geographic Information Systems Office.
